SEAL SALE TO AD CRIPPLED

Oakland County's Quota Set
At $2,000 As Annual Drive Opens

Efforts to raise $2,000 for Oakland County's share of the annual Crippled Children's seal sale are under way this week under the county chairmanship of Judge H. Russell Holland, of Pontiac. Although not strictly a Rotary movement at this time, Rotarians from Pontiac, Birmingham, Royal Oak, and Ferndale are backing the campaign. Ralph I. Coryell, Birmingham Rotarian, district chairman of Oakland, Macomb, and Lapeer Counties, prophesies that Oakland County will come through with its quota for the State.

"This movement is a most worthy one," stated Mr. Coryell, "and we know that if every section of Oakland County is visited by workers, the campaign to rehabilitate our unfortunate handicapped boys and girls will be successful."

Chairman Holland has set Pontiac's quota at 75,000 seals, Birmingham's at 20,000, and Ferndale's and Royal Oak's at 25,000 each. Under the direction of Miss Leola Jacques, directing nurse for the Oakland County Chapter of the Michigan Society for Crippled Children, the remainder of the seals will be sold in areas of the county where Rotary does not reach. Other clubs and organizations are offering their support to the movement.

"These seals, or stamps, are sold at a penny each, and come in sheets of 100," explained Chairman Holland yesterday. "They may be affixed to business or personal letters, just as other worthy seals are used."

Mark Hardin, local Rotarian, is serving as chairman for the Birmingham area. Other members of his committee are Harry E. Bissett, Charles W. Crandell, E. Morse Cooke, George B. Boutwell, John McKee, Forbes S. Haswell and Joseph Strupp.

The campaign will end shortly after May 1.

Elders were at the same age. They have greater access to the thoughts of the day; the newspapers and the radio and the many forums and movements for discussion offer youth increased and enlarged opportunities to learn about the world in which they have been thrust. Youth, apparently, wishes to change that old maxim to "we'll be heard as well as seen."

School systems are out of step with youth's needs, said youth. It goes to school for years, passes examinations, meets most of the academic demands of the pedagogue, and

WE HEARD IT SAID BY—

Dr. William Lloyd Kepp, health officer: Thus far, Birmingham has had only a scattering of measles, but I'm afraid there may be a general outbreak of the disease at any time.

then finds that its graduation certificate is poor exchange for a meal ticket. Youth wants more emphasis placed upon the practicalities of life in the public schools. Youth wants its high school course set up so that college or university, if it will not be "left out on a scholastic limb," so to speak. (Youth hasn't yet had to grapple with the problem of raising families of paying tremendous taxes, of meeting a payroll.)

You would have been interested in youth's discussion of sex problems, of getting married, of birth control. Without batting an eye, those young boys and girls faced this reality of life before adults, and declared in no uncertain terms that their parents had neglected to tell them of one of the most vital experiences in human existence. They believe that parents want to tell their children more about these problems, but that their parents are prevented from doing so by two things; first, parents are bothered by a queer sort of shame that prevents them from telling their children about sex and birth control, and also, parents really don't know enough about it themselves to tell their young. Youth wants the home to tell them something about sex and birth control, and also wants the school to do some telling, too. Youth sums up its attitude about this: "We are human, we can't find jobs, or at least we can't earn enough money to start raising families on; and, besides, we don't think that we should start raising families until we are married long enough to find out if we are suited to each other. We want to give our children compatibility in the home. We also want to be sure that enough money is coming in to the home to support them decently."

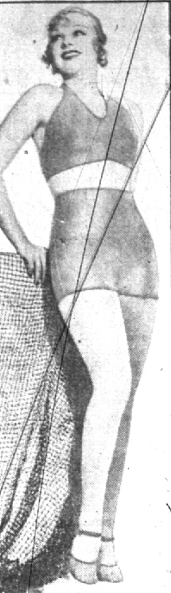

Youth also feels that the average community pays too little attention to its recreational problems. It wants schools and churches and homes to create proper programs of recreation for them. It wants athletic pursuits and other physical contests, it wants dances and theatricals; it wants to have a place in the family circle, in the average living room. Girls, especially, at the Youth-Adult Hearing stated that they are not given as much community attention as boys are. They want their place in the sun of organized and directed youth programs.

It was a fine adventure in human relationships—was that Youth-Adult Hearing held here in Birmingham a few weeks ago. I hope that more of them are held, and that permanent agencies are set up to assist in building that very much needed bridge of sympathetic and intelligent understanding over the wide chasm that separates youth and its problems from the adults of this and succeeding generations.

The Resolution

The Commission's resolution follows in full:

"Whereas, Wider Woodward avenue has been for some years contemplated, both north and south of the City of Birmingham, and since this situation has resulted in an unbearable condition on the old Woodward avenue in Birmingham, paved in 1928, and

"Whereas, the old Grand Trunk right-of-way has long been designated as a cut-off to provide adequate traffic width, including a grade separation, and because no substantial progress has been made on the project within the last seven years, and

"Whereas, repeated approaches to the highway commissioner have elicited nothing but vague hopes and promises, and since the project could be, in the judgment of this Commission, materially furthered, not only by the state alone but with present federal co-operation, and

"Half-Hearted Approach"

"Whereas, this Commission, the City Planning Commission, the Oakland County Road Commission and special committees of citizens have repeatedly journeyed to Lansing to urge action on the project, holding a conference with the Governor of the state in October, 1934, and

"Whereas, such efforts have resulted either in a half-hearted approach to the problem, or in no action at all, and since we believe that neither this community nor the traveling public to the north and south of us have been fairly treated, but, on the contrary, have been unconsciously abused by delays and inertia

"Therefore, be it resolved, that the city manager be and is hereby instructed to bring again to the attention of the highway commissioner the urgency of this improvement and further discuss the matter with the Governor and with the representative and senator from this district, and

"Be it further resolved that in default of definite assurance that this improvement will be presently begun, the manager open the old railroad right-of-way to traffic and divert all north-bound traffic (not local) on such right-of-way."

"Be it further resolved that copies of this resolution be forwarded to the Governor of the state, the senator and representative from this district, the highway commissioner, the Oakland County road commissioner, and that copies also be sent to the service clubs of this city, for their information and co-operative action."

Group Aims To Promote Outdoor
And Recreational Interests
In Oakland County

Plans to restore Oakland County to a high place in outdoor and recreational appeal, and to develop sports and recreational facilities, crystallized recently with the incorporation of the Outdoor Sportsman's Association by more than 60 Oakland County sports lovers.

The Association's initial project revolves around the expansion and development of the Drayton Plains State Fish Hatchery into what is hoped will become the largest blue gill hatchery in the world, and a subject of national interest and appeal. The project aims at increasing the production of blue gills and bass at the hatchery to permit a restocking of Oakland County lakes and streams.

Other aims of the new Association are to increase the general fish and game supply in this area, open new lakes, streams and fields for outdoor recreation, expand and publicize tourist facilities and invite visitors to the Oakland area, and to help secure the benefits of the tourist trade, now the second largest industry in Michigan.

The president of the organization is Mayor Frank B. Ruff of Pontiac.
