Our Children

By ANGELO PATRI

Take in any way you look at it Monday morning is a bad time for the children. The week-end broke their routine. Their bodies have been forced to adjust themselves to another rhythm and that always makes children and grown people, irritable. They don't mean to be bad tempered, they just are, and cannot help it. When your whole body is grumbling your mind cannot maintain a sweet and strong attitude. That would be too much to ask even of one's mind.

Things are always lost on Monday morning. The brief case that John left "right there," cannot be found. The belt of Janet's dress which she knows she fastened to the dress the very last thing Friday afternoon, has vanished.

The schoolroom fares no better, indeed it fares worse. The children arrive in various degrees of distress. They get up late, the breakfast wasn't right, the milkman hadn't come. The teacher feels dull, tired, weighted down with the cares of the ages. Monday morning isn't the happiest time imaginable for any of us. It takes a long time to get by it and that means so much time wasted. What is to be done about it?

For one thing, don't begin Saturday until Friday is nearly completed. Too many children think Saturday begins Friday noon. Keep them to their schedule. All lessons are to be completed Friday afternoon and no excuse for leaving them until the weekend is to be allowed. That means that mother will be saved hunting for a fountain pen and a sheet of note paper on which to write an excuse to the teacher on Monday morning.

All school clothes, books, whatever has to do with school on Monday morning is to be laid waiting and ready before going to bed on Friday night, exactly as it would be if it were Thursday night. That means that mother won't have to hunt for somebody's shoe, belt, hat, and whatnot.

When things have been arranged for school on Monday morning let the week-end have its way. Children need to break routine as well as to maintain it. Let the children rest and play, secure in the knowledge that they are ready for Monday morning. We won't have a hundred per cent perfection but we will save a lot of trouble and time. We can get the school work well started by Monday afternoon instead of Tuesday. And we can maintain some sort of peace and order in the household over the week-end.

Auxiliary Favors
4-Point Program

Members of the American Legion Auxiliary, at a meeting Tuesday evening, voted to support the "Four Point" program favoring "full payment of adjusted compensation," protection for World War widows and orphans, universal draft and national defense. Letters were read to members from Senators James C. McHugh, Arthur H. Vandenberg, and Congressman George A. Boller.

Mrs. Russell Heimer, sang a group of vocal solos, accompanied by Mrs. Ray Cook. Mrs. Charles Coburn was in charge of the tea which followed the business meeting.

Mrs. Gordon L. Bailey was appointed chairman of a chop suey supper to be held early in February.
