HAVE YOU

and THAT

Here's a dandy fine thought for is new year, written by Horatio elson Powers, and it sorta opes e view to life's unlimited store-use of goodness:

of goodness; ower unblown; a Book un-read; Tree with fruit unharvest-

ed;
Path untrod; a House whose rooms
Lack yet the heart's divine perfumes;
Landscape whose wide border lies

In silent shades, 'neath solent shies; Fountain yet unscaled; the silent solent with its gifts concasted with its gifts concasted the solent waste beyond Tomorrow's mystic gates.
