Former Head of Local Woman's Exchange Leaves Three Daughters

Funeral services for Mrs. Carolyn Werner Cole, former head of the Birmingham Women's Exchange, were held Saturday afternoon from the S. O. Wiley Bell Funeral Home, with burial in White Chapel Memorial Cemetery. The Rev. Dr. D. D. Hopkins, pastor of the First Methodist Church, officiated.

Mrs. Cole, 48 years old, died last Thursday night at St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital, where she had been a patient since the previous Tuesday. Death was caused by a heart ailment.

She was the widow of Claude D. Cole, who died Feb. 22 of this year. They came to Birmingham about 10 years ago from Iowa. Until 1930, Mr. Cole was branch manager in Detroit for the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company.

Mrs. Cole was born in Memphis, Tenn. She operated the Woman's

Birmingham Before Today

By MINNIE HUNT SALTZER

The old First Methodist Episcopal Church was built at the north-west corner of Bates and Merrill streets in 1839. It was a large frame building, with an open porch in front. The pastor's study was at the right of the front entrance.

On the left side of the entrance was a staircase leading to the balcony, and in front of the staircase was a large, ornate chandelier. The church was used for a variety of purposes, including as a school, a place of worship, and a community center.

Mrs. Sarah Lee (daughter of Mrs. Rachel Harmon Williams), told me that for several years the salary was paid, for the most part, by her mother and by Mrs. Mary Ann Culver (later Mrs. James M. Hunt). Donations of wood and farm produce from other members of the congregation of course, supplemented the monetary portion of the salary.

New Church Built
The Rev. Edward Steele was the pastor in 1844. I have the marriage record of his daughter, Mary Ann Culver, signed by Mr. Steele and dated Mar. 8, 1844. It was during the pastorate of the Rev. Steele that the present church edifice was erected. Mr. and Mrs. Bert were the parents of Bert, Myrtilla and Alta Ford. The timber for the building was made from the old Wooster farm, now the Hawkswood farm. Willis Carter, who lived on the farm, told me that the timber was cut by William Smith, a sawmill. (The Smith farm is now known as the Endott farm.)

The bricks were hand made and the clay came from the Stanley farm, which was situated east of the junction of Adams road and Woodward avenue. From the sidewalk to the top of the tower, the church is built of brick, the building measuring 100 feet. The carpenter work was done by Robert Bookham, known as "Bob" and Willie Carter.

A picnic was held in the auditorium of the church, before the building was completed. A severe thunderstorm came up and a bolt of lightning came into the building through the southwest window. A young woman, standing toward the front of the room, struck by the bolt, but not seriously injured.

Eye Awaits Children
The stained glass window over the entrance of the church, before the building was completed, was bought with contributions from the children and young people of the congregation. The window, which is now in the building, is a beautiful work of art. It is a window that has been in the church for many years. It is a window that has been in the church for many years. It is a window that has been in the church for many years.

There were four rows of pews in the southwest and southwest corners of the church. These were known as the "Amen Corners." On special occasions, when the children took part in the programs, the "infant class" occupied the pews in the southwest corner. Mrs. Eugene Brooks (sister of Mrs. Alta Ford) told me that she was a member of the "Amen Corners" for many years. She was a member of the "Amen Corners" for many years. She was a member of the "Amen Corners" for many years.

Mrs. Brooks had a great many flowers and on Children's Day each child in the class wore a beautiful bouquet of rose geranium leaves and spring blossoms, with other decorations. The stems of these bouquets were covered with tin foil. Later, Mrs. Eliza Daniels, Blackhawk, in Detroit, superintendent of the primary department. Her assistants were Mrs. Grace Blackledge Deer and Ella Adams.

A human bat is A. Kharchukhanov, Soviet parachute jumping instructor. He leaped from an airplane soaring 10,000 feet over Rostov-on-Don, Russia, and glided through the air for 4,000 feet before parachuting. For seven minutes and three seconds Kharchukhanov soared through space on his parachute. The airplane pilot, who was making a successful landing, Duralamin takes as "bones" to support the wings which the batman demonstrates above.

There was a boom for a while in the sale of rubber imitation bank notes which, from a distance, faintly resembled real money. All the street hawkers snapped and cried this and in response to the demand the dime stores took them. However, the whisper came that G-Men, browsing about, were prone to cast a bilious eye on the street hawkers snapped and cried this and in response to the demand the dime stores took them.

The pin-marting game is on the spot, too. Mayor La Guardia has down on the nickel-grabbers and the proprietors of emporiums which feature these fascinating, tinware are said to be getting little sleep these nights. Read an Aswell fashion column and hear all about the pin-marting game.

Incidentally, one of the swankiest of the named Robert (Robert to you) has it all figured out that lady murders are always carried out by their confederates. He will show you pictures of Wanda Judd, Mrs. Ruth Snyder, Irene Schroeder, Beatrice Snyder and Mrs. Anne Antonio to prove it. They all look pretty strappy, I admit, but who wouldn't in jail?

He also had some pictures showing that the women who get murdered are, as a rule, sleekly coiffured, but the sleazebags to lady clients.

FAR EAST THREAT

All the luring beauties this summer, meet my spies, will look like a parade of rosy beauties, with their coiffees, some of them four feet across, so that the officers won't be embarrassed when they lack enough sense to come in out of the rain. Not so many pants for the girls this year. Yerville District, I hear, has put her own slacks in the math balls (she never did really agree with the girls' slacks that she did not wear) and will wear chintz peasant skirts this year.

All you actors have an explanation on full of teenage technicalities about what peasant skirts are, but lady to others will know anyhow and it will be to say they resemble the living room curtains drawn tight at the waist.
