State FHA Chairman Asks Support For Housing Drive

Foley Says Act Aims To Give Security To Home Buyer

Speaking before members of the Birmingham Rotary Club and invited guests at luncheon Monday at the Community House, Raymond M. Foley, chairman of the Federal Housing Administration, made an appeal for co-operation in promoting the Better Housing campaign now under way in this city.

"You may not agree that the State takes the form of the State," he said, "but the fact is that the State is taking the form of the State. The State is taking the form of the State. The State is taking the form of the State. The State is taking the form of the State."

"In effect, the national Housing Act says that America is not a home," he said. "It says that America is not a home. It says that America is not a home. It says that America is not a home. It says that America is not a home."

"In our systems of the past we have been able to build a home," he said. "We have been able to build a home. We have been able to build a home. We have been able to build a home. We have been able to build a home."

"Now comes the Housing Act," he said. "It provides for long-term mortgages. It provides for long-term mortgages. It provides for long-term mortgages. It provides for long-term mortgages. It provides for long-term mortgages."

"That is only one feature of the act," he said. "It is only one feature of the act. It is only one feature of the act. It is only one feature of the act. It is only one feature of the act."

"Describes Organization," he said. "It describes the organization. It describes the organization. It describes the organization. It describes the organization. It describes the organization."

"He Allen is cock-of-the-roost among Exchange Club bridge players today," he said. "He Allen is cock-of-the-roost among Exchange Club bridge players today. He Allen is cock-of-the-roost among Exchange Club bridge players today. He Allen is cock-of-the-roost among Exchange Club bridge players today."

City Again Considers Use Of 'Pressure' In Tax Drive

Again city officials are wondering whether they should use "pressure" in their tax collection drive.

Several weeks ago City Manager James W. Barry suggested that the publication of the names of delinquent taxpayers might serve to hasten the collection of delinquent taxes. But he has not yet decided whether to use "pressure" in their tax collection drive.

After a lengthy discussion, the problem was turned over to Commissioner Lawrence Hulbert for a recommendation after conferring with Mr. Barry, City Treasurer Harold H. Carson, and Scott A. Hersey, special treasurer's assistant.

Mr. Hulbert said he would not recommend the use of "pressure" in their tax collection drive. He would not recommend the use of "pressure" in their tax collection drive. He would not recommend the use of "pressure" in their tax collection drive.
