DANCE FEATURE OF FLOWER FESTIVAL

Amateur Gardener Will Find His Hobby Glorified At Church
Fete
A tea dance in the late afternoon, and an opportunity to wander through a happy hunting ground for the amateur gardener, where he will find much that is both useful and ornamental in the way of garden accessories, will be offered to those attending the spring Flower

Festival sponsored by the choir committee of St. Margaret's Guild under auspices of the League of St.
James Women, in the church parlor Saturday from 2 to 5 P. M.
Mrs. Walter F. Hirdrich, general chairman for the festival, announces that orders will be taken for both flowers and plants prior to the opening of the festival. Annals, perennials and rock garden plants will also be sold to those seeking new flower faces for the home garden.
Mrs. Warner L. Forsyth is chairman of the tea dance, for which Maxwell Gail will furnish the music. Assisting Mrs. Forsyth on the committee will be Mrs. L. C. Minor, Mrs. Edward Smith, Jr., and Mrs.
John B. Kendall.

Assisting the committee on the tea dance also will be a group of younger girls, including Harriet and June Babcock, Betty Minor Forsyth, Joan Baker, Dorothy Kates, Helen Brown, Marjorie Smith, and Betty Wibbel.
Mrs. W. H. Jackson is in charge of the afternoon tea, which will give guests an opportunity to relax and chat. Presiding at the tea table will be Mrs. John B. Gay and Mrs. J. J. Roura, Jr.
Mrs. George T. Hendrie is chairman of the publicity committee, and assisting her is a group of young people composed of Natalie Welch, Christine Smith, Peggy and Joan Hadjisky, Alice Lee Heinmiller, Mary Anne Neff, Kitty Roura, Marian Kirk, Eugene Hadjisky, Fletcher Plant and Norman James, Jr.

St. Hugo's Chapel Is Scene Of Post-Nuptial Service

Easter lilies and burning cathedral tapers added to the classic simplicity of the Chapel St. Hugo's of the Hills for the mass which followed the marriage of Miss Theodora MacManus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore F. MacManus of "Stoneycroft," and Alexander Tolboof of Hollywood, solemnized Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.
The nuptial service was read by the Rev. Daniel Whelan in the rectory immediately preceding mass in the chapel.

Disposals of lilies were used in the decoration of the chapel, and the tapers in tall standards were placed between the pillars, around which twisted garlands of cybottum ferri.
Of classic loveliness and suggestive of mediaeval fashions, was the gown worn by the bride. The satin, which was brought from France about 15 years ago, and originally was of pale ivory, was mellowed by age to be almost golden in color, and the rose point lace and tulle of which the veil was fashioned were timed to harmonize with the antique hue of the gown.

Full Length Train

Reminiscence of the days of tight-fitting pointed bodices and voluminous skirts, was the quaint bridal gown with its full train, six yards in length. Like the bodice, the sleeves were also long and tight-fitting, ending in points at the wrists. The long veil, which fell the length of the train, was held in place with a head dress of rose point lace, arranged like a halo.
The bride carried a small formal bouquet, colonial in design, of valley lilies.
Miss Margaret McCarren, who attended Miss MacManus as maid of honor, wore a gown of cream mousseline de soie, fashioned on princess lines, with a double blouson in the skirt and close sleeves forming two tiers over the arm. Her hair of yellow net was brilliant in the back, but had small buns shading the face. A bouquet, similar in design to the bride's, but composed of yellow roses, completed the costume.
For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. MacManus chose an afternoon frock of gray crepe, made with a short jacket and having a scalloped collar and sleeves. With it Mrs. MacManus wore a lingerie vest and a smart stitched hat of
