Author To Direct Own Play In Hills Production

There is at least one play, which will be produced in accordance with the author's ideas and wishes, and that is, "It's the Woman Who Says," by Marjorie Hemmings Sanford.

Mrs. Sanford, who is a sister of the novelist, Ernest Hemingway, will be on hand to direct the production of her own play, which will be presented by St. Dunstan's Guild, with two other meat plays in the auditorium of Brookside School, Friday evening, Dec. 6.

Another interesting fact about the play is that it won the prize for the best original play of last year offered by the Theater Arts of Detroit. Mrs. Sanford, who makes her home in Detroit, is associated with the Theater Arts. The play is her initial dramatic effort.

Mrs. Sanford will have as her assistants in directing the play, Mrs. Frederick E. Booth and Mrs. C. Theron Van Dusen. Taking part in the play will be Mrs. W. Hamilton Aulenbach, Mrs. Walmar P. Adams, Mrs. Robert J. Grinnick, Mrs. John Morley and Miss Romayne Thompson.

Vernon B. Kellett and Edwin Stephens have collaborated in the translation of Arthur Schnitzler's "Last Masks," which will be offered as the second play. Mrs. M. W. Cochran will be the director, assisted by Mrs. John Schofield.

In the cast will be Mr. Kellett, Mr. Stephens, Harry D. Hoy and Richard Rasmussen, and Mrs. Ronald Ballyne.

"The Moving Finger," by Percival Wilde will be the third play on the program, with Mrs. H. C. Paton as her assistant. Appearing in the play will be Henry Scripps, Booth, Henry Whiting, Jack Blanchard, Dr. Edward Boardman, Mrs. H. C. Paton, Helen Hopp, Roger Marquis, Jack Sanders and J. Robert F. Swanson.

Mr. B. G. Bragg is the production manager for the three plays.
