Nuptial Vows Are Spoken At Rites In Bride's Home

Standing before the fireplace banked with cythron ferns, palms and white chrysanthemums, Miss Mary Jane King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. King of Shirley drive and Ronald I. Friedline, son of Mr. and Mrs. Burt I. Friedline of Springfield, Mass., spoke their nuptial vows at ceremony read at noon Saturday in the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. R. D. Hopkins of the Birmingham M. E. church officiated.

Miss King's bridal gown was of white satin, fashioned along princess lines, with a train of silver lace. Her veil was of tulle, fastened with a cap, caught on each side with orange blossoms, and falling to the shoulders. She carried a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses.

Miss Dorothy King was her sister's only attendant. She wore a frock of pale blue tulle, made with a tight bodice, puff sleeves and square neckline. The skirt, shirred on a cord at the hip line, fell to the floor in folds. She wore a wreath of blue and silver leaves, and carried sweetheart roses.

Dick McGaw of Indianapolis was best man for Mr. Friedline.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. King chose a gown of brown and silver lace, with which she wore a corsage of tallianum roses. Mrs. Friedline's gown was of wine colored velvet, and her flowers, gardenias.

At the wedding breakfast which followed the ceremony, the bride's table was arranged with a centerpiece of bronze chrysanthemums and silver candlesticks holding bronze candles.

For traveling costume, Mrs. Friedline wore a three-piece gray wool suit, and a jacket of gray caracul, with wine-colored accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Friedline will make their home in Springfield.
