Horse-Feathers We note that the French dust-fragrances are using feather-dusters in their campaign. They ought to be successful. Look what Sally Rand did with hers.—Ohio State Journal.

English Sparrow Days The horse and buggy had one advantage: Dealers couldn't change the design every year to make your old ones look funny.—Buffalo News.

Nothing New A professor's selection has been found with its legs tucked about its neck. This bears out the belief that the rumble seat is not as new as is claimed for it.—Greenville Piedmont.

A Distinction One of the funniest things about the good old article of our set is the stern distinction they draw between a person who dyes her hair and one who merely touches up.—Ohio State Journal.

Big Ears Keeping them to the ground is necessary, politically, with perhaps explains why both the Democratic donkey and the Republican horse have big ears.—Jackson Miss. Citizen-Patriot.

Old, Old Yankee Joke The test of a sound film is whether the movements of a character's lips synchronize with the words heard. This test, however, is useless for American films in which the characters generally talk through their noses.—London Opinion.

Jest For Fun

Her Guide "Mr. Williams had just returned from a business trip. 'Did you go to Rome?'" asked a friend.

"I really don't know, my dear," replied the traveler. "You see, my friend, I always forget the location."

His Chance "Employer: Explain, you, dearest, what you do for a living." "I'm a lawyer."

"What do you mean?" asked the puzzled one.

"I mean, I'm a lawyer."

Domestic Art "Can you ever get company?" asked the housewife when she was being served.

"Yes, my dear, both ways."

"What do you mean?" asked the puzzled one.

"I mean, I'm a lawyer."

Cooperation "And what have you been doing today, darling?" asked the doctor of his bride.

"I've organized a class in cooking."

"What do you do with the things you cook?"

"I've sold them to the neighbors."

"I don't like women," the doctor explained. "Always thinking of their husband's pocket."

The Whole World "Who do you call that an enthusiastic steak?"

"Because the cook put everything he had into it."

Relieved Now "Mrs. Peck—Henry, did you ever have more money than you know what to do with?"

"Henry, I must have had or I never could have got married."

Careless Boy "Father, why were you kept in school?"

"Miss A. didn't know where the Arabs were."

Father in the future, just remember where you put things.

Dark Cloud "You say you pay only a very low rent for this beautiful apartment?"

"Yes, but I'm going to move."

"Good gracious, what has come over you?"

"An opera singer."

Catching Up "Game Warden—What's the idea of hunting with a last year's license? You know better than that, don't you?"

"Hunter—Nothing wrong in that, as far as I can see. I'm only hunting at the birds I missed last year."

Business Sense "Mother—Well, Eddie, did you get the little sister of which one of the two apples she wanted?"

"Eddie—Yes, mamma. I told her she should choose between the small apple or none at all, and she chose the small one."
