STARS IN DUST

Movie - Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

IF YOU failed to see "One Way Passage" when it was originally released (and apparently everybody failed to see it then), you may have another chance, if one of your local theaters follows the example of one of the New York ones and shorts it again.

Hailed as one of the best pictures of its time, it ran into bad luck because it came along when the program was at its height. The picture just weren't going to the movies then.

It's still a grand picture. William Powell is as expert in it as he is now—but he looks a lot younger. Kay Francis is very lovely, and Frank McHugh proves that there, as now, he is one of our best comedians.

Incidentally, the same McHugh is coming right along. He is to have a perfect role in a "Three Men on a Horse" in fact, he's to be starred in it. Among other things, he's to be playing it on the screen. And his excellent performance is the result of a fact that a long career on the stage started as a child, appearing in melodramas with the rest of his family taught him practically everything there is to know about acting.

Margaret Sullivan's marriage to Leland Hayward came as a decided shock to a lot of people. As a result, rumors have been flying around for a long time to the effect that it was Katherine Hepburn who had married either Wood or Powell and had already married. And now the man who leads the field when it comes to getting jobs for non-picture actors, selling stories and doing all the various things that an agent has to do, has proved that everybody was all wrong. The husky-voiced Margaret came first, apparently.

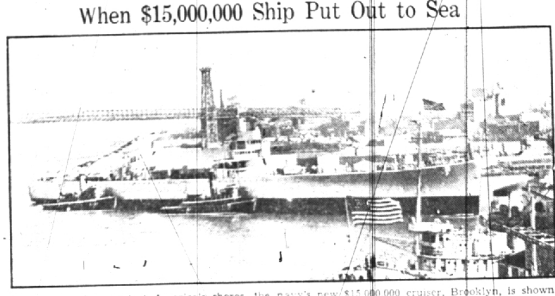

Whether you like football or not, you'll be amused at "Pigskin Parade" it's hilariously funny. And the Yacht Club Boys do plenty to make it amusing.

Lily Pons is turning that Connecticut farm of hers into a wild animal shelter; she'll cater to deer especially. And as one who has lived in those parts and had deer drop in to breakfast, your correspondence would like to advise her that she'll have plenty of them.

Helen Hayes does a good deal of rehearsing for her "Bambi" broadcasts, and during the off moments that occur at all rehearsals she knits. Does it fast, too—she can turn out mittens and socks in no time at all, and the results are turned over to a charitable organization for distribution.

Sonia Henke, the championship skater who's now in the movies, doesn't care much who knows how terrified she was when she made her first career tests, or how hopeless she felt when she saw them.

One of the reasons given by Paulette Goddard Chaplin for keeping her marriage a secret for so long was that she wanted to make her own name. But the speculation that she has been going on for ever so long as to whether she and her famous comedian father were engaged, were married, or were just friends has kept her name in the papers, coupled with his always. She appeared in the picture with him, it was announced that he would direct her, too. Can't see why it would be any different if the marriage had been announced when it took place. Except, perhaps, in the amount of publicity.

Commissioned to protect America's shores, the navy's new $15,000,000 cruiser, Brooklyn, is shown here after it was launched at the Brooklyn navy yards, Brooklyn, N. Y. The cruiser, second of a revolutionary 10,000-ton type, will be armed with 15 fast-firing six-inch guns, now standard on most light cruisers. The cruiser was being towed into dry dock for finishing touches when this photo was taken. The U. S. S. New Orleans is in the foreground and the Williamsburgh bridge is in the background.

The People Who Are Afraid

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Over much of the Old World today we are witnessing a swift and disturbing rise and power by self-appointed leaders of the People Who Are Afraid.

Afraid of what? Afraid of freedom. Afraid of themselves and their own capacities. Afraid of machines and their inventions. Afraid of assuming responsibility for their own thoughts, their own efforts, their own lives. Afraid of the future.

That's why they are willing to turn to forms of government which offer to relieve them of that responsibility. That's why they are eager to scrap their own identities for unassumed promises of security offered by Fascism or Communism or the various other isms which now fear Europe.

To the average American worker, proud of a national heritage of courage and self-reliance, it is surprising to transpire fears may seem a strange and remote thing. But the prophets of defeatism, both at home and abroad, are not convinced of the American attitude. Hopefully they continue to seek converts here.

Their way should be a hard one. The American tradition remains one of freedom and achievement.

The American people are not afraid of liberty, or they could never have achieved a Declaration of Independence and a Bill of Rights. They are not distrustful of their capacities, or they could never have conquered a continent. They are not fearful of machines, or they could never have produced a Edison. They do not dread the future, or they couldn't continue the bold and ambitious plans for national progress so typical of the American spirit today.

Europe and its cities may continue to chant their swan songs of despair. But of America we still say with the poet:

"I do not know beneath what sky Nor on what seas shall be thy fate; I only know that shall be high, The only one that shall be great."

In such an outlook there is no room for fear.

Receiver Completes Mailing Of Checks

C. Henry Purdy, receiver for the First State Savings Bank here, announces that all checks to depositors, issued for the seventh five per cent dividend of $20,000 which the financial institution has paid out since closing its doors, have been placed in the mail for delivery. The receiver requests recipients of checks to cash them as soon as possible.

In payment of the dividend was begun Dec. 7 in alphabetical order. Funds for the payment were collected through rent, sale of property, interests, and other sources of revenue. No fraction of the money was lost to the receiver because the dividend, Mr. Purdy said.

SHOT REBOUND FATAL

Louisville, N. Y., Jan. 10.—A 15-year-old boy, fatally injured while deer hunting with his wife and several companions, standing aside while the others shot. Davis was struck in the windpipe by a part of the charge which rebounded from a rock.
