

LECTURE-CONCERT SERIES ARRANGED

Detroit Symphony Orchestra Plans Eight Programs For Adults

One of the most important of feigns in the history of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, the Lecture-Concert Series for Adults has been announced by Murray G. Paterson, manager.

This series, to begin at 8 p. m. Monday, Jan. 25, in Orchestra Hall, and to continue for eight consecutive Monday nights through March 15, has been designed to acquaint adults in the Greater Detroit area with the great music literature of all time.

At each of the eight concerts everything will be explained clearly. "Appreciation Through Experience" will be the keynote to this lecture-concert series, and those thousands who will seek to make up for a silent childhood, where good music was seldom heard and rarely understood, will be afforded an opportunity in the history of symphony orchestras in the United States.

The Detroit Symphony Orchestra has been a pioneer through its concerts for children and young people. This work has helped the orchestra gain and maintain a high international reputation. Now in presenting its lecture-concert series for adults, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, so far as it is known, undertakes a work never before done anywhere.

Each lecture-concert will consist of an hour program by the orchestra, preceded by a thirty-minute lecture and followed by a question and answer period.

Victor Kolar, internationally known orchestra conductor who was brought to Detroit by the late Ostop Gabelshonoff, will be in charge of the programs. Edith Rhett Tilton, educational director of the Detroit Symphony Society, will present the lecture and lead the question and discussion periods.

The complete list of dates and topics, to be presented with the aid of stereopticon slides in color and in black and white, and involving in the discussion references to the other fine arts as well as an understanding of the social background of the times. Jan. 25, Woodlands and Bransley; Feb. 1, Classicism and Great Classicists (featuring the fugue); Feb. 15, Classicism and Great Classicists (featuring the symphony); Feb. 22, Romanticism; March 1, Romanticism; March 8, Nationality in Music; March 15, Wagner.

Tickets for this series, to go on sale at Orchestra Hall, on Jan. 2, will be sold at nominal rates.

mother of Dr. George P. Reynolds. Clara was the mother of Mrs. Grace Camp Pease (who with her first husband's mother perished in the Iroquois Theatre fire in Chicago) Mrs. Mable Camp Sackett, wife of Mr. Willie Bassett, and a son John Camp. Emma was the mother of Reynolds Whitehead, Ed Bodine was the first pupil to graduate from the Hill school.

Ida lives in Detroit with her daughter Marjorie. Allie Bodine was the husband of the former Mrs. Emily J. Adams. She was a graduate of the Hill school and was a talented musician. She taught the piano for several years. She was the mother of three daughters, one of whom was a gifted cellist. After the death of Emily, Allie Bodine married a second time. It was always his desire to take up a permanent residence here. About one year ago he returned and he and his present wife opened a News stand in the store next to the First National Bank. It has been a successful one at this store and meet Mr. and Mrs. Bodine and chat awhile.
