STAR DUST

By VIRGINIA VALE

IF YOU are among the many who never fail to tune in on Major Bowes' broadcasts on Sunday evenings, you'll be interested in the discussion of money matters that's going on.

The genial Major's contract expires in September, and the same sponsors want him again. So do others. He asked $18,000 a broadcast, then cut it to $15,000—twice what his old contract brings in.

As for the amateurs who appear on the program, they get five dollars an appearance. If they get the song it's doubled. If they are good enough to land with a unit, they draw real money.

As soon as "The Garden of Allah" is finished the stars are going to scatter like spilled quicksilver. Marlene Dietrich will go to London. (She plans to put her little girl in school in Europe next year, which will mean their first separation for any length of time.) Basil Rathbone will head for London also.

Charles Boyer leaves for Paris, and Joseph Schildkraut for Austria. And as soon as they arrive, so do the "it" girls. They'll be summoned back to Hollywood for more pictures. The wise picture star, when starting for a vacation, leaves no address.

When you see "The Good Earth" don't sympathize with the actors, thinking that they had to shave their heads for the picture.

The head of the Make-up department at Metro, Jack Dawn, mixed up a dressing that would give the effect of shaved heads—and by using the actors use it, the company saved a lot of money. You see, had the actors had to become bald for the picture, they'd have had to be paid till their hair grew again!

Ginger Rogers has been in pictures for six years. She celebrated the anniversary just the other day. She still likes them. But the girl has unlimited energy; after working all day with Fred Astaire on dance routines for their next picture, she goes out dancing in the evening.

Ben Lyons and Bebe Daniels sailed for England the other day with their daughter Barbara, aged four and cute as she can be. Ben and Bebe will make personal appearances (they've been coming money doing it over here), and then take a vacation on the Riviera. They have more fun than almost any other married couple in Hollywood.

Fred Allen could journey to Hollywood and make pictures this summer if he wanted to; the offers have been rolling in thick and fast. But he has turned them all down. When he is broadcasting he works all week on each broadcast, and he feels that he's entitled to a rest when he goes off the air for the summer. So he'll vacation in his home town in Massachusetts—and probably pick up new material for his next series of programs.

Katharine Hepburn is taking no chances on her next theatrical appearance. Signed with the Theater Guild to do "Jane Eyre" next fall, she insists on a preliminary out-of-town tour lasting six weeks, just to get her and in.

It's rumored that Margaret Sullivan will also have a try at the New York stage, where she was doing very well indeed when the movies captured her, and she became a favorite of screen fans.

Robert Taylor's New York vacation remained hectic to the very end. Leaving a broadcasting studio after he'd been on the air for 16 hours was mobbed by a crowd that took 15 policemen to handle—and then one of the fans got away with his handkerchief, and another took one of Taylor's shoes to remember him by!

ODDS AND ENDS. "The Rivals," the famous play by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, which has been delighting theatergoers for some two hundred years, will reach the screen before long. . . . Imagine Shirley Temple in a picture called "The Bowers Princess" . . . Rudy Vallee was given an honorary degree at Suffolk Law school recently. . . . Richard Barthelme will appear in "The Spy of Napoleon," an English picture. . . . George Bell traveled East for the Louis-Schmelz fight. The French government made Harry Warner of Turner Brothers a Chevalier of Honor for producing "The Story of Louis Pasteur."
