

Exposition Proving Meccato Traveling America

Visitors to the Great Lakes Exposition on Cleveland's lake front are enthusiastic about the way the original purpose of the Exposition—the demonstration of the industries which have made the prosperity of the Great Lakes Basin—has been carried out. It is a graphic picture of the reasons for the country's wealth.

These visitors to date have numbered nearly one million persons and each day the industrial and commercial exhibits are attracting increasing attention.

Iron and steel are recognized as the basis of the industry of the manufacturing centers of the middle west, and the great producers of iron and steel have combined, in intensely interesting exhibits, to show not only the extent to which manufacturing processes have been carried but also to demonstrate in striking fashion the historical beginnings of the industry. From a graphic portrayal of the production and shipment of the ore, coal and limestone used in blast furnaces and steel mills to moving models of giant machines of manufacture, the exposition visitor is able to study the industry to a point where books could not take him.

There are also interesting exhibits of many articles of manufacture, from machine tools and steel house frames to the latest in household equipment. Various lines of food products are shown, and there are automobiles, farm tractors, heating and air conditioning apparatus, and presses and almost everything which helps to make up the equipment for modern living.

The exposition is not entirely a school, even though the lessons it teaches are of vital interest to the many thousands who pass through the grounds each day. The exhibits are arranged in a logical location, on the shores of Lake Erie.

makes a perfect setting for a play-ground, and there have been provided many amusements, including the famous theatre with square stage, a wonderful view of the grounds and the business section of Cleveland and leading their touch of the modern to the Exposition picture.

The facts are, if we are to get a rabbit stew we first have to catch the rabbit. Likewise if we are to have hangings or decorations or to let a dog or whatever else's taste in that direction may prefer, then the first step is to get the fender. And right there is where our forces appear weak.

brutally butchered and someone ought to hang for the crime. But who did it? So far our sheriffs and state police have not learned. Last fall Bert Webb, here in our own neighborhood, was sitting with his wife at the end of an honest day's toil in the mowing in his own home. Some desperate and inhuman wretch shot him dead and no one was yet to be caught who had done the deed. What is the use of having a hanging law if we

The NEWS is not opposed to capital punishment. It supports the idea of capital punishment. But it has no notion that writing such laws on the books will stop crime. A relentless, properly trained, state police force to discover the criminals ought to be the first step. Once apprehended and committed to the matter of fitting the punishment to the crime is comparatively easy.—Ingham County News.

OIL HEAT COSTS LESS THAN COAL

PENNY-WISE is Gallon-Foolish

You can buy cheap oil-burning and air-conditioning equipment that will appear to save you money in the short run—just as you can buy cheap hammers, or plumbing or cheap paint. But you can't buy any air-conditioning equipment, at any price, which will render you such dependable, economical service over a long period of years as Gar Wood Tempered-Aire.

Owners say Gar Wood oil heat costs less than coal. That means year-in-and-year-out economy. It means four heat per dollar spent for fuel.

That is why 1935 was the biggest year in Tempered-Aire's eight years of history—and why Detroit sales of Gar Wood oil burning equipment for the first five months of 1936 are more than double the sales for the same period of 1935.
