The Way to Fame
Valdosta (Ga.) Times: Author: Well, sir, the upshot of it was that it took me 10 years to discover that I had absolutely no talent for writing literature.
Author: Oh, no; by that time I was too famous.

Book-Keeping
"And upon what income to you propose to support my daughter?"
"Five thousand a year."
"Oh, I see. Then with my private income of five thousand a year I've counted that in."

Best Twig
A half-life started his wife's wrath. Fully pushing babies from his path. Fully grown he followed insisted this—
He drives an automobile bus!

Strong Talk
First boy—My uncle is so strong he can stop a train with his right arm.
Second boy—Gosh! Is he a strong man in the circus?
First boy—Nope. An engineer!

Unfinished Symphony
He had just joined the high school band in time to take part in a concert. At conclusion of the first number, a very long one—he hurried over to his neighbor. "Have you finished?" he asked tensely.
"My coat," replied the other, "Why?"
"Cause I've still got a page to play."

"In the Midst of Life, Etc."
Kitty: That was a rather good lecture you made of the dead lion. Pardon! It should be so, I parted from life.

No?
Jimmy: Why do you call my cat a cat? I call it a cat.
Tom: I know her the other night and she never told.

Agreeable
Self-Denying Father: "Son, can't you cut down on your college expenses? You know they are almost ruining the family."
Self-Indulgent Son: "Well, I might possibly die without any more."

She's Watching
Father: "Mother, don't that young man a bit fast?"
Mother: "Yes. But I don't think he'll get away."

Well, Yes
Wife: "Do you know what day it is?"
Husband: "Yes, today since we became engaged."
Wife: "Twenty years ago. Why didn't you divorce me before? It's high time we got married."

More Correct
"The Major," you know, I have been your Es-laid once he returned to civil life.
The Es-laid's Wife: "You must know he was released from the army, don't you? He never was any real."

No Danger
"Did you hear about Jack slipping in front of a car?"
"Was he killed?"
"Yes, the train was backing up."

Etiquette
Teacher (reading): Then came the great, dignified-looking forth, little Johnny. Did he excuse himself?

Lazy Bones
In the mountains of Kentucky lived a hillbilly so lazy that he spent the whole day lying under an apple tree. Tradition said that he had done this for 20 years. It was fall and the apples were dropping. One of them hit the native of the head, and when he paid no attention to it, a horse's head was astonished into exclaiming:
"Say, don't those apples bother you?"
The hillbilly shrugged slightly. "A little," he replied, "but only in the autumn."

Between Friends
Bill: "Is it really true that you're going to divorce Bob?"
Bobbie: "Yes, I'm tired of being alone."
Bill: "I think that's a perfectly wonderful thing to do."
Bobbie: "It is a grand thing."

Supply and Demand
Gus: "I am wondering if it's hard to be a head-fai daughter."
Old Man: "With several yet to go. It's a darn sight harder to be the honey store."

Concerning Space
"Have you much room in your box that?"
Heaven: "No. My kitchen and dining room are so small that I have to live on condensed milk and spaghetti."

And Busy, Too
Solicitor: "Is your loss in?"
Office Boy: "Yes."
Solicitor: "Can I see him?"
Office Boy: "No, he is in for six days."

Girl Friend
Weren't you married after five years of writing radio gags?
Boy Friend: "No, sweetheart, but several pairs of seers were."

Some Chance as a Zebra
"Say, warden, what's the chance of getting out after five years of writing radio gags?"
Warden: "Well, you've got down stripes—these make me look so short."
