LILY PONS IN MAY FESTIVAL

Six Concerts To Feature Many Stars And The Choral Union

The Ann Arbor May Festival of 1936 promises to mark a new milestone in the Festival history of more than two score years. In addition to the engagement of the Philadelphia Orchestra under Leopold Stokowski, with its full complement of more than one hundred men, a list of outstanding soloists have been engaged for the six concerts to be given May 13, 14, 15 and16, including opera stars, oratorio singers, and leading instrumentalists.

Among the stars who will appear in the festival are; Lily Pons, Jeannette Vreeland, Rose Bampton, Giovanni Martinelli, Paul Althouse, Keith Falkner, Julius Huehn, Efrem Zimbalist, Harold Bauer and Palmer Christian, who will play the organ.

The University Choral Union under Earl V. Moore, will participate in two programs, offering brilliant choral works, with attractive orchestral accompaniments. Elgar's vibrant and brilliant "Caractacus" will be given Thursday night; and on Saturday night, Verdi's operatic "Requiem" in memory of Alessandro Manzoni with a cast of operatic singers will be heard.

At the Friday afternoon concert, as usual, Miss Juva Higbee will present the Young People's Festival Chorus in numerous selections, including the performance of Pierne's, "Children at Bethlehem."

Lathrup Citizens Hold League Party

Saturday evening, February 29th, the Citizens' League of Lathrup Townsite held its annual winter theatre party at the Cass Theatre, Detroit, enjoying the humorous play, Three Men on a Horse.

It was announced that plans for the affair had been arranged hastily and as a result there was not a full attendance of the league members at the party. However, the 22 who did attend thoroughly enjoyed every minute of the evening. Following the show the group assembled at Hedges' wigwam for refreshments, returning to Lathrup Township later.

SUNDAY EVENING SERVICES STARTED

The First Presbyterian Church has arranged a series of five Sunday evening Lenten services, each to start at 7:30 o'clock. It was announced that the meetings will be confined to one hour duration.

The program for the Lenten gatherings includes: March 1, "Was the World Made in Six Ordinary Days? How could the Writer of Genesis Know?"; March 8th, "Two Men Go for a Sail, One via Ark, One via Whale"; March 15th, "Jericho's Walls Tumble at a Shout—or Did They? Jephtha Vows a Vow—Should all Vows be Kept?"; March 22, "Dead Men do Tell Tales. Do Evil Spirits Possess Humans Today?"; March 29th, "Armageddon! The next World War! The Coming Dictator—Who? When?"

LENTEN SERIES OF SERVICES PLANNED

A special series of Lenten services is planned for the remaining Sundays of March at the First Methodist Church. Sunday, March 8, will be "Every-Member-at-Church Day. Following in order, Men's Day, Women's Day, and Young People's Day will be observed. A series of Lenten addresses on the theme, "Today's Demands on the Christian Religion," is planned by the minister for these services. The subject for next Sunday will be, "An Adequate Personal Faith."

For the evening services, beginning at 7:30 next Sunday, there will be a series of three devotional addresses based upon the recent book, "Meditations on the Cross," by Kagawa.

Rambling Reverie

E. G. W.

Meandering: Things that are hard to take—advice, castor oil, money from a bank, nagging, bridge beatings, criticism and, above all, praise. Young, in his Love of Fame, wrote,

"The Love of Praise, howe'er concealed by Art Reigns more or less in every heart."

On the path downward, a man goes through the stages of dejection, turning into despair, the latter burning out in demoralization. Going up, however, a person ascends much more rapidly, and therein lies the danger of praise. When we are criticized, we consciously or otherwise, become hostile disregarding the criticism, usually, as unsound or biased judgment. Fanning our egotism produces far different results. We become highly receptive to the soft-soapers' comments, feeling confident that he is a shrewd estimator of human nature.

E. G. Whitney

If we run into too many glib-tongued individuals, who forever and a day are patting us on the back, usually with an ulterior purpose, our sense of personal importance becomes exaggerated, resulting in a distortion of our true personality, the loss of common sense and a dwarfed appeal to other humans. It all boils down to what Emmerson preached so fervently. He said, "Be Yourself." You can't be yourself if you are riding the clouds, impressed with your importance as the result of an overdose of praise. Acting natural, even to the point of disclosing your idiosyncrasies, is best.

—o—

Merely Mentioned: If 'Doc' Hassberger tells that story about the parrot and duck again, we'll go nerts . . . Lots of the kids behaved better than their dads at the Father-Son banquet . . . Al Tenny dropped in to say hello . . . Virginia Packard is a good listener . . . O rare virtue among women . . . Baldwin Principal, Melvin Hart seems to radiate kindness . . . Don Bell's handshake leave a lasting impression . . . saw five blondes in the Library, all fixing their hair at once . . . Ken Bingham is the most obliging soul you ever saw . . . and Fire Chief Griffith is the most polite leader of a bucket brigade we ever contacted . . . cheerio.

—o—

Misinterpreted: Hailed before Judge Forbes Hascall on a charge of fighting, a negro man was questioned by the court as to the reason precipitating the encounter.

"Moss," he said, "Dat other nigger called me a black so-and-so. What would you do if he'd called you a black so-and-so?"

"I hardly think," Judge Hascall replied facetiously, "that he would have accused me of being a black so-and-so when I'm white."

"Well then, Boss," came back the colored man, "what would you have done if he had called you the sort of so-and-so you is?". (Editor's Note: So-and-so is not the correct word.)

Miscellaneous: Why did the Confederate flag have 13 stars when only eleven states composed the alliance? . . . gotcha on that, comrade. Only 25 per cent of the American people take care of their 'chewers,' proving the axiom that many a true word is spoken behind false teeth. Business is on the upgrade . . . that's why it's such a heck of a pull for most of us . . . huf sed.

—o—

Memory Method: Not so long ago a delicate operation was performed on the brain of an English girl. Physicians found a piece of tar embedded in the vital organ. On regaining consciousness, the girl revealed that a cow had butted her. The cow had tar on its horns.

That's one way of driving something into a woman's mind.

—o—

Masterpiece: If you're planning a trip South in the near future, make it a point to stop over at Atlanta, Ga., and visit the Cyclorama in Grant Park. And just in case you are a bit confused, let us point out that the park most assuredly was not named after the Northern general.

Getting back to our story, the cyclorama is an accurate depiction of the Battle of Atlanta, painted, in part, on the walls of a circular building, about ninety feet in diameter.

You enter the building from underground, coming out on a raised platform in the center of the huge room. The view represents a distance of thirty miles in any direction. Near the base of the wall the painted scenes merge with life-like figures of men, horses and trees. In addition, ramparts and roads of clay, guns, rail tracks and other things are strewn about to make the picture of the battle as vivid as possible.

The interesting part lies in the fact that the naked eye cannot detect where the painted scenes leave off and the moldings and wax figures begin. For example, in one scene a rider has horse is descending a steep hill. Part of the animal is unquestionably of waxen construction but, standing on the platform, you are unable to discern where the painted portion of the horse blends with the other part.

It took three German artists about three years to construct the entire cyclorama, if memory serves correct. The battle is reproduced as closely as possible to the historical recordings of the struggle.

I'LL BE SEENG SALLY SOON

Where a song is on the night-wind,
and the leaves are dressed to go,
Where the katydids are singing
and the pine-trees whisper low,
Where the screech-owl's shrill trio-lo,
and the hoot-owl's deep bassoon
Mingle with the brook's low music
—I'll be seeing Sally Soon.

Where tobacco, corn and cotton,
goobers and sweet 'taters grow,
And the sorghum-cane's grand army,
waves its spearheads row on row,
Where the golden yellow pumpkins in a rich profusion swoon
Shine and glisten in the moonlight
—I'll be seeing Sally soon.

Where the 'possum eats persimmons,
turned to sugar on the trees,
And the hunting hound is restless,
as he sniffs October's breeze,
Where the 'coon comes to the corn-field, with the rising of the moon
And the muscadines are purple—
I'll be seeing Sally soon.

Where the bobwhite calling briskly,
perched upon a shock of corn,
Tells us dew is in the meadow, at so early hour of morn,
When the squirrels gather chestnuts, and the beehives wake at noon
When it's autumn in the mountains—I'll be seeing Sally soon.

—David R. Ames
