

TIPS and THAT

By G. R. A.

Seven Mistakes in Life.
1. The notion that individual advancement is made by crushing others down.
2. The tendency to worry about things that cannot be changed or corrected.
3. The feeling that a thing is impossible because we ourselves cannot accomplish it.
4. The attempt to compel other persons to believe and live as we do.
5. Neglecting development and refinement of the mind by not acquiring the habit of reading fine literature.
6. Refusing to set aside trivial preferences in order that important things may be accomplished.
7. The failure to establish the habit of saving money.

The Tactful Waiter.
A crowd of the elite were dining in a smart restaurant when a waiter entered, and he coughed loudly, and tied his napkin around his neck. In great embarrassment he turned to the waiter and whispered, "Try to make him understand as tactfully as possible that he is coughing."

The waiter approached the offending diner, leaned forward and said, "Excuse me, sir?—Mutual Magazine."

Scientific Plans.
By R. E. Prescott
This is a scientific age. Of that there is no doubt. What puzzles us is why it took so long to get here. Why did we for so many years progress by rule of thumb and trial and error, and by other methods dumb? At mental toil we taxed our brains or tried to do it, and we were right all the time we had at hand our books and alphabet. We hesitated, we thought of the matter, we incurred and that some day we'd have to pay. Which shows how dumb we are.

With deep regret we scan the years of struggle and of strife. We see the dew of science, the more abundant life, before the reign of reason by those scientific minds who have exceeded their stock of common sense. We recall how one we worried when we got in a jam, how we simply sit and hold for a lift from Uncle Sam. These scientific gurus volume and convey a nasty look and relate to us the answer that is printed in the book.

Their system proved inadequate to scientific age, so today we get our knowledge by the volume and page. And now we hesitate where angels fear to tread since the scientists have changed the courses for ahead. In the realm of frenzied insanity, they jerk rabbits from a hat. They will pay the price. It's as simple as that. And by prestidigitate and the use of rabbit powder—but the bond is up, the sleazy. And today they ditch the volume and declare a new plan on a theory not touted as a scientific plan.

They have plans for conservation, there's a plan for TVA, a plan to harness ocean tides, an unworkable plan for the Columbia River dam. And we know all plans have functioned when we buy a slab of ham. There are plans for public projects on the land, and we know that the plans have functioned when we buy a slab of ham. There are plans for public projects on the land, and we know that the plans have functioned when we buy a slab of ham.
