SUPERSTITIOUS BELIEFS

—By Blumey

THE ORIGIN OF SUPERSTITION GOES BEYOND HIS COMPREHENSION WHY SHOULD A MAN BE STRICKEN WHOSE VISIBLE AGENCY IS TOUCHED BY HIM?

PARAGRAPHS

Definition: Poise—The result of not being ashamed of anything.—Richmond News-Leader.

Camouflage: The name of Non-Partisan League seems to be applied in an effort to conceal partisanship.—Jamestown (N. Y.) Post.

Two Reasons: If he removes his hat in an elevator, it means he has (1) good manners and (2) hair.—Dayton Journal.

33 1/3 Wings Per Bird: Thirty thousand pigeons were released, filling the air with the flutter of a million wings.—Statesman and Nation (London).

The Real Accomplishment: Ethnology says American Indians practiced trephining, or brain surgery, thousands of years ago. They were better known though, for their scalp treatments.—Arkansas Gazette.

Yonkers: Hearing that likers in Yonkers may not wear shorts will merely add to the original confusion of the British visitor, who asked, "What are Yonkers?"—Glendale (Calif.) News-Press.

Bumps Ahead: With all those political drives in progress an I-10 traffic regulation, a good many political traffic accidents are likely to occur.—Indianapolis News.

Rain Pictures: Leader of a Russian eclipse expedition said, sourly, "We went 10,000 miles to see a rainbow." If he took pictures of it a Midwest tour might be profitable.—Boston Transcript.

Spanish Romance: People who have been inclined to get romantic about "castles in Spain" probably will feel inclined to seek romance in some other country just now unless they want their romance mixed with gun-roads.—Burlington (Vt.) Free Press.

Just For Fun: "I understand that Bill Smith is another man since his operation." "Yes, he's calling himself Bill Jones to avoid paying the hospital bill."

At the Studio: Woman (nearly excited): Enter! These photos you've taken of us are terrible—my husband resembles a monkey. Photographer: That's very true, making, but you should have thought of that before you married him.

Hollywood Trip: See those fellows on the corner. They're discussing holding a chain conference. "Milkman: What?" At a street in the morning. "Sign: Sure, they're framing up an idea before they face their wives."

Encouraging: Kathryn: I intend to marry Billy Billson, in spite of all opposition. Kettle: If Billy sees you're real determined I don't think he'll oppose you so very long.

Dentist: I'm still trying to get the money for the last tooth I pulled for you. Patient: Why I paid for that months ago! Dentist: I know, but I'm still trying to make my wife give it back to me.

Accidents Will Happen: Judge: You're accused of breaking a chair over your wife's head. Accused: Your honor, it was a mere accident. Judge: What? The striking of your wife? Accused: No; the chair breaking.

"My wife has been working on the car, Simkins," the household maid said to the chauffeur. "Well, not much so far," was the meaningful reply, "tinks the two dollars I got for your golf clubs." Bookkin Eagle.

Thrifty Lad: "Pon, I'm saving up for a bride," said the boy hopefully. "Fine; glad to hear it. How much you got so far?" "Well, not much so far," was the meaningful reply, "tinks the two dollars I got for your golf clubs." Bookkin Eagle.

That's Strict: "That minister is so strict he won't even perform a marriage ceremony." "Good Heavens! What's that got to do with his morals?" "He says his conscience won't permit him to participate in any game of chance."—Montreal Star.

Wrong Number: A very strict lady was called out of bed one morning at 5 a. m. The following dialog ensued: Voice—"Hello!" Voice—"How are you this morning?" "Just all right." Voice—"Then I guess I must have the wrong number."

The Cause of His Downfall: Lady: Here are five pennies for your poor man, but tell me how did you come to get this low? Beggar: Ah, my dear lady, you might well ask—remembering a time I was like you—gave away magnificent suits to the poor every day.
