Republicans Say

If there were not so many issues, both legitimate and false, being discussed over the air, in the press, and by speakers the Social Security Act would be the subject of debate from one end of the United States to the other.

This act, quietly enacted in the midst of other New Deal legislation, will effect every man, woman, and child in the United States all of their lives, yet millions of those effected know little about it. Many have never heard of it at all.

Yet part of the act has been in operation for the past year and the complete act becomes operative on January 1st.

Workers all over the nation are just discovering that 1% of their pay will be automatically deducted by their employers. This percentage will increase until, by 1949, 3% will be deducted.

There can be little criticism of the Social Security theory, but it is generally agreed that this act is a bad piece of legislation and that it does great harm to the cause of Security.

There are two major faults with the act. The first is that there is no guarantee that, after a huge fund is accumulated from the pockets of employer and employee, it will ever be paid back to workers as either pension or unemployment insurance. The act does not provide for it and there is no reason why, in a period of business depression, the Congress can appropriate the money for anything it pleases.

The second major fault is that life insurance that would include the same pension features can be purchased at a saving of 40%.

There are numerous minor faults all of which can be lumped under the general heading of Regimentation. The worker and his employer, history has heretofore remained his own business unless, when seeking employment, he is asked to give an accounting of himself. Now his permanent record from the time he comes under the provision of the act as a young man until he dies will be on file in Washington. He will be numbered. Other means of identification will be used.

From the employers standpoint, and employers under the act are those having eight employees or more, his payroll is no longer his own business. It will be available for competitors, even though the administrators of the act may not mean it to be.

The cost of the provisions of the act will come, of course, out of the consumer. The employer will simply add the cost of the payroll tax to his product.

To receive an annuity for which he has contributed from one to three per cent of his salary, the worker must cease working. He must give up painful employment to take a pension which at its maximum will be $85 a month. Most of the pensions will be much lower.

The burden of paying into the fund will be borne upon the back of the young worker for many years. He will not only have to provide for his own pension, but he will have to help accumulate a surplus to take care of the present older generation.

There are several other faults in the act, both immediate and prospective. It has been attacked by the very persons who have fought for years for Social Security legislation. It was the subject of one of Governor Land's major speeches in his campaign. The defense offered has been vague; either its faults are to be corrected or "some legislation is better than no any."

The Social Security Act remains a perfect example of ill-considered hastily-enacted New Deal legislation. Here again, as in so many other fields of liberal political philosophy, the New Deal has taken the credit for progressive legislation—legislation that in fact does more harm than good to the cause of humanitarian government.

County Debts

Lansing, Oct. 21.—Michigan's eight-three counties are holding the bar to the tune of $106,880,000 as their share of the Roosevelt national deficit of $12,800,000,000. The share of Oakland County is $20,062,000.

In estimating the county's share of the total state deficit, two-thirds weight was given to the county's assessed valuation and one-third to population.

Inasmuch as President Roosevelt has said "Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors" the investigation of the amounts owed by counties showed that the burden of New Deal spending falls the heaviest in all Michigan counties on those who have held own property, or rent a home or farm.

The present estimated national deficit is $26,000,000,000 and to learn your county's share of this tremendous sum multiply your county's deficit quota by three.

Democrats Say

What Price London?

Much has been said, and more insinuated, about the "great burden" President Roosevelt has piled upon our children, our children's children... and so on and on ad infinitum!

"When America rbe to the cry, 'Save the world for democracy' did you hear anything about the 'great burden' that emergency would saddle upon future generations?"

Of course, no!

The profits from that wholesale murder poured into the pockets of the privileged few who owned and controlled materials that sank the ships that carry our boys to foreign soil to fight against an enemy, equipped with arms and ammunition that these same few privileged giants of industry made and sold right here in our own country!

Profits!

That's the break in the cloud behind all this thunder. Unable to reach out and grab in tremendous profits at the expense of "the little fellows," these wizards of finance pout and shout about the "great burden" Roosevelt has saddled upon this country.

No burden has been saddled upon anyone. Not even upon those who had labor.

The truth is America faces a better, happier future than any of us have ever known. A tomorrow with peace, a major objective, peace with opportunities for our children the like of which we have never even dreamed of.

Roosevelt has always been, and always will be an ardent advocate of education.

Let's look at the record. You won't like it. If you're a devoted wool Republican, you probably won't even want to believe it!

In his 1935 message to the legislature, Governor Landon boasted: "It is significant that during the past three years costs in Kansas have been reduced approximately 40 per cent."

Yes, costs were reduced. But at what terrible cost to the children of Kansas!

Inadequate remuneration given to Kansas teachers led to a wide migration from that state, drove competent teachers into other fields of activity, and those who remained were held only by personal loyalty.

444 districts closed. Teachers received $25 a month—or, if they were among the more fortunate, $9 a week.

Kansas schools fell from 15th place down to 27th among the states on school expenditures under Landon.

Mothers had to become teachers to meet the crisis in Kansas. And think this over in Kansas, educational standards under Landon dropped so low that for a first class teacher's certificate, only a high school education and six months' experience is required!

Second class requirements are less profound; that is, the applicant must be 18 years old and has an examination!

Think of it.

Is that what you want for the children of these United States? Since the beginning, these United States have held to the proposition that education must be free and equal for all of the children. Roosevelt, being a true American, root to the emergency that confronted him when he took office, 200,000 teachers unemployed, many of them highly trained, 2,000 rural schools closed, 700 schools running less than three months.

Roosevelt wasn't then, isn't now, and never will be Money-Bags' henchman! He believes in traveling opportunity for education for our children and for our children's children, and so on and on ad infinitum!

Under the Roosevelt administration a new school in every five improved in some way. More than half the public school instruction in the United States is financed by the Public Works Administration.

The National Youth Administration has made it possible for 105,000 high school students and 123,000 college students and post-graduate students to continue their education.

14% of the honor students in the "class of '36" were helped to finish their courses by the National Youth Administration (19,000), 45,000 rural schools in 33 states, where local resources were exhausted, received assistance.

Compare these records! Think "WHAT PRICE LONDON?"

Jots in Jest

"MAN beaten in washroom." Johnny must have finally put his foot down on this ear-washing question.

The average person uses about 34 pounds of air a day, but house to house canvassers get more than that.

Codfish are used as a medium of exchange in Iceland. Dora thinks that's where the expression C. O. D. originated.

"Blast Rips Cleveland Stadium." These football coaches will have to get better control of their fullbacks.

"Vienna man arrested for selling space in heaven for 15 cents a square yard." We doubt that the property was dumped back in his lap.
