Authority On South America Speaks At Detroit Town Hall

When Edward Tomlinson, noted press, radio and platform authority on South America, addresses the Town Hall audience in the Fisher Theatre, Wednesday morning, Nov. 4, at 11 o'clock, he will discuss Detroit's own stake in South America. In connection with his lecture, "The American Investment in World Diplomacy," he says, "No city in America has more stake in the Latin American continent than Detroit. Every branch of the automobile industry is represented in Brazil and Argentina with factories, branch plants and distributing houses. There is Henry Ford's tremendous investment in the heart of the Amazon country."

Mr. Tomlinson went to Geneva last summer to make first-hand observations of the League of Nations sessions, with an eye to their effect on the Latin American nations. Three days after his Town Hall lecture in Detroit, he sails from New York with the United States Delegation, headed by Secretary of State, Hull, to attend the widely heralded Pan American Conference in Buenos Aires. He will act as radio commentator on this conference for the National Broadcasting Company, the first broadcast taking place at the time the American delegation leaves this country. Following the conference Mr. Tomlinson will circle the entire South American continent by steamer and by air, travelling over 16,000 miles. This will make his 13th annual visit since 1923 to this part of the world.

Edward Tomlinson knows the inside story of the great game of international politics now moving to its climax in the other Americas. He knows the presidents and dictators, generals, explorers, business men, gauchos, farmers and peasants—and has interviewed most of the men now in power. Tickets for his lecture are now on sale at Grinnell's and Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Fisher Theatre.

Predictions
Next week the "tumult and the shouting dies" politically. The voter will be able to read the foot ball news without searching for it in other columns of what Senator Doakes, said about Senator Doakes, and vice-versa. He will locate Eddie Cantor and the Marching 100 on his radio and of political talks that strew the autumn air. The cheers and roars of movie audiences will subside. We will be able to devote our time uninterruptedly to the King and Mrs. Simpson. The presidential election, the proof every four years that America is the greatest democracy of them all, will be over.

Now is the time for predictions. The situation will probably not be altered in the next few days and the will guesses of July and August can be placed on a par with a job that will get unemployment insurance, through the Federal tax on payroll, if the State passes the unemployment law approved by the Federal government.

Sec. 1—The worker at 65 years will get $16 to $45 a month depending on service and Federal old age insurance to which he has not contributed. Sec. 2—A worker who is out on a job will get unemployment insurance, through the Federal tax on payroll, if the State passes the unemployment law approved by the Federal government.

Sec. 3—States will get Federal grants matching their own grants, for old age pension for the needy and blind, for mothers' pension, child and mother health care, welfare, and other social work. Federal old age benefits should not be confused with unemployment compensation. They are separate and distinct features of the act, one to insure security for the aged, the other to help them come for the unemployed. Each is paid out of its own separate fund which has already been established.

Federal old age benefits are provided for directly by the Federal government. The funds are raised through taxes on the employers and employees. The wage earner who contributes one percent of his wages to a fund for his own old age, secures the full contribution of an equal amount from his employer.

It should be again emphasized that both employer and employee contribute the same amount, and the employee receives all the benefits from these contributions. What is the amount of the contribution? The act provides that, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, the Social Security Administration must estimate and submit annually to the Bureau of the Budget the amount of appropriation to provide for the payment to be made to the Social Security Administration. There is an account created known as the "Old Age Reserve Accounts" which protects the guaranty of the United States Government for payment of old age benefits in accordance with the act. These old age benefits will be paid to individuals over 65 years of age beginning on January 1, 1942. They will be based upon a certain percentage of the individual's earnings as of December 31, 1936. In case of death they will be paid to the heirs of the individual.

Under this plan every working man or woman in the country, except those engaged in domestic or agricultural labor, or of some other exempted occupations, will build up an annuity for his old age, and in case of death, this fund will be paid to the dependent ones.

The worker is not contributing this one cent to the government, it is really a system of banking it for use in his old age. He can accept it with a feeling of self-respect, knowing it is his own, but the act goes further. It also requires that the employer, for the worker's old age, an amount equal to his own contribution. In that way the old age benefits is doubled.

So much for the old age benefit act.

Unemployment Compensation
What is really unemployment insurance, is termed in the Social Security Act, "unemployment compensation." Under the terms of the act, employers or more shall pay an excise tax to the collector of internal revenue who, in turn, pays it to the Secretary of the Treasury. Employers of farm or domestic labor, and some others, are excepted from this act.

All other employees of eight or more, including all those engaged in business, commerce, manufacturing, building, contracting or other industrial activities, are subject to the act.

The employer pays into the Unemployment Compensation Fund as follows: One per cent of the total wages of his employees for the year 1936; he pays two per cent for the year 1937; after December 31, 1937 he pays three per cent.

What does the worker pay? He pays nothing. It is the employer who pays in the Social Security Act requiring the worker to pay a penny toward the Unemployment Compensation Fund. What becomes of this money paid by the employer to the Federal government? In a state where there is Unemployment Compensation, ten, the employer pays the whole amount of his payroll tax to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. In a state which adopts the Unemployment Compensation Act, the taxpayer employer will have to contribute to the State fund. In such cases the employer can deduct from the amount of the payroll tax payable to the Federal government, the amount that he has to pay to the state fund up to but not exceeding ninety per cent. The other ten per cent goes to the Federal government and is spent in administering the act. Under the Social Security Act, Unemployment Compensation is a Federal and State provision. It requires the cooperation of the Federal Government and the State government. It does not dictate to any state as to what sort of unemployment plan the state may wish to adopt, but the plan must include certain provisions.

Federal Agent To Address Men's Club At Dinner Meeting

Hernold G. Hunsbeck, chief of the Detroit office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will address the Men's Club of the local Presbyterian Church on Thursday evening, November 5, when the group hold their annual pajama dinner in the church building. The meal will be served at 6:30 o'clock and Mr. Hunsbeck will speak to the assembly immediately following. All men who are members of the Presbyterian Church are invited to attend the affair.

Mr. Hunsbeck, who graduated from Bowdoin College in 1927, with an LL.M. degree, has enjoyed a long and interesting career as a "G. Man." Formerly connected with the Federal Bureau of Investigation at Charlotte, N. C., he later was transferred to Philadelphia, Pa., and then to his present office at Detroit. He has been in every state of the Union and during the time he has served as a government agent he has participated in many thrilling adventures with those who live in the "wild west" of the law.

Mr. Hunsbeck is one of the group of Federal men who helped locate Bohemia in Northern Wisconsin, searching for the dead desperado, John Dillinger.

MOVES LIVE WIRE, DIES

Waterloo, Iowa—Donald Smith, 29, lost his life while trying to make a sidewalk safe for other pedestrians. Noting a broken street lamp on his way to work, the sidewalk, he attempted to climb out of the way. He died instantly from the electrical shock.

BIRTH RATE DECLINED
New York—The nation's birth rate dropped again in 1935 to 16.8 births per 1,000 population, almost reaching the all-time low of 16.4 recorded in 1932. Only nine states showed increases during 1935, as follows: Illinois, Michigan, Mississippi, Arizona, Colorado, Oklahoma, California, Florida and Montana.

for you — to safeguard vision and prevent tired eyes for your home — to enhance the charm of your living room

The new 3-light lamps accomplish a twofold purpose: They provide beauty for your living room, introducing a fresh and charming decorative note, and causing your drapes and furniture and pictures to glow with new life and color. But more important, (2) they serve as a tonic to tired eyes, guarding against strain and headache, against the tense lines that are etched prematurely in young faces through reading under poor light. These lamps are no substitute for the services of your eye-sight specialist: You should see him regularly once a year. But a 3-light lamp will insure safe, adequate illumination for your home... lighting far superior to that furnished by our present lamps.

Under the modern standards of lighting, probably ALL YOUR LAMPS are out-of-date! Stop in and see the new 3-light lamps today... and ask about the difference they make in your home lighting.
