Ups and Downs in Business Since 1905

The story of skirts for the business girl, from 1905 to 1937, is revealed in this picture, taken at the National Business Show held in Chicago. At the left is the ideal secretarial habit of the early 1900s and, at the right, is the 1937 model. Skirts have dropped a good bit since 1927, represented by the girl second from the right, but it appears they're on the way up once more.

Jane Withers just dares any kidnaper to come around her house threatening to call the police. Now, in addition to her usual body-guard, a Texas Ranger who looks as if he could roar an army single-handed, her father is usually around, and he has been sworn in as a deputy sheriff, complete with guns.

Apparently Sam Goldwyn won't be happy until he signs up simply everyone of note in the entertainment world for his Folies company. Over London he has picked Vera Zornina, sensationally successful young ballerina, under contract.
