There is a wave of public opinion which has been gaining ever since the beginning of the depression...

There are comparatively few towns in America above a population of 3,000 in which slot machines, pinball machines, horse joints, the numbers, bolita or some other form of lottery does not flourish...

A half-billion dollars of the "legitimate" gambling money goes to the fair, carnivals, county race meets, charities and a number of "small games of chance" which are affiliated with well-organized syndicates...

Half Million Is Bet in Area on Relief

Last year, for instance, Massachusetts racegoers backed their chances thirty-five million dollars...

This money was wagered in places where parimutuel betting is permitted...

It is interesting to know that in one New England district where nearly a half-million dollars are poured into tracks in a single month, the majority of persons in the area are over relief...

Always on the Job

Streets are deserted. Homes are dark. Night has wrapped the community in slumber.

In one building, however, a light is still shining. It shines on steadily through the hours of darkness until, at last, the dawn heralds the stir of another day.

That light sums up the eternal vigilance of the telephone. It is truly a beacon of public service, one that stands ready to serve any one, anywhere, any time.

All that modern telephone service can mean—all its protection and convenience and comfort—is yours to command twenty-four hours a day.

It takes no holidays. It is in an old familiar phrase, "always on the job."
