HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF! 'Hot Time in Siberia' By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY: Alexander Accomando of Fairview, N. J., comes to bat today with a story of heat and cold—a yarn that will steam you up and freeze you stiff by turns, just as it did Alec some seventeen or eighteen years ago when he had a hot time in the coldest country on the whole continent of Asia—Siberia.

The men rubbed their bodies to kill coolies. There was oil soaked into the woodwork. It was one of those places that people look over and say, 'Boy, if this dump ever catches fire, there'll be hell to pay.'

At nine o'clock that night the lights went out, and Alec went down to the first-aid room to visit his friend Frank Leskanick. While he was there, another buddy, Corporal Kaplan, came in, weak and pale. 'Boys,' he said, 'I think I've got typhus.'

'The place,' he says, 'was a MAD FRENZY. Screaming and howling. Everyone was running toward the stairway, and I ran with them. We reached the stairs, only to find the stairway a roaring furnace.'

Between him and the windows was a broad stretch of flame, but it was the only way out. The floor was burned through, and it was a stiff jump across. Alec leaped—and made it. Then, standing on a narrow strip of solid floor, with a hot fire creeping up in back of him, he smashed out a window and looked down.

Alec Saved Himself by Jumping. Between him and the windows was a broad stretch of flame, but it was the only way out. The floor was burned through, and it was a stiff jump across.

Five men were burned to death in that fire, and thirty-two were injured. But the STRANGEST THING OF ALL was what happened to Corporal Kaplan.

Strange Case of Corporal Kaplan. After Kaplan had left the first-aid room he had gone to bed, as sick as he was practically helpless. The fire came and swept over him before he had time to get out of bed.

Those two lads thought Kaplan was dead, but they wanted to save his body. They wrapped him in a blanket and threw him out of a second story window before they jumped themselves.

Even when he was safely out of the burning building, the adventure wasn't over for Alec. He was scantily clad and freezing in that sub-zero temperature. He started to drag himself away, but as he did, part of the roof blew off and showered him and a lot of other soldiers with bricks.

The men who were uninjured were diving back into the building, trying to drag out their less fortunate buddies. Alec says it would take a book to tell about all the acts of heroism that were done that night.

And for me, says Alec, 'I saw two extremes of temperature that night—the heat of the fire and the cold of Siberia.'

An electric range is the gift of gifts... something every woman wants and hopes some day to own. An electric range is more than just another stove: It combines SIX GIFTS in one.

- 1 The gift of kitchen freedom. An electric range brings extra hours of leisure to do the things you enjoy most. You can put your whole meal in the electric oven and go out for the afternoon. A Timer Clock (available at small additional cost) turns the oven on and off at the proper time. When you come home your dinner is waiting, perfectly cooked—piping hot and ready for the table. 2 The gift of cleanliness. An electric range cooks with pure heat from a glowing wire—heat as clean as sunlight. You will enjoy the ease with which you can keep your kitchen bright and sparkling, with less frequent redecorating expense and practically no scouring of utensils. 3 The gift of better meals. Electric cooking has a delicious natural flavor. There is nothing else like it. Meats and vegetables cook to melting tenderness in their own juices. You'll be amazed at the difference electric cooking makes in ALL your recipes. 4 The gift of healthful cooking. The waterless cooking method is at its best on an electric range. Precious minerals and important food values are sealed-in... not boiled away in excess water and poured down the sink. 5 The gift of comfortable cooking. In hot summer weather, an electric range does not raise the temperature of the kitchen, even one degree, by actual test. 6 The gift of modernness. Electric stoves installed ten years ago still look as good as the day they were installed. An electric range will often beautify the entire kitchen. Electric cooking is the finest cooking that money can buy... and today, you don't need a great deal of money to buy it! Electric range prices are now so moderate that you can purchase an electric range for about the cost of an average stove of comparable size and features. This Christmas, choose the gift that will serve the entire family... surprise her with a new, modern, sparkling ELECTRIC RANGE! See the new electric ranges on display at department stores, electrical dealers and at all Detroit Edison offices.
