

FRENCH DRAWINGS NOW ON DISPLAY

Arts Institute To Display
Paintings in Gallery
During February

French paintings from the time of Louis XIV will fill the large exhibition gallery of the Detroit Institute of Arts during February, representing two different currents of life in France in the 17th century. The practical realism of the sturdy French bourgeoisie and peasantry appears in the paintings of Georges de La Tour, the three Le Nain brothers, Antoine, Louis, and Mathieu. The elegance of Louis' famous court of Versailles is reflected in the pictures of the more familiar classic painters like Poussin and Claude Lorraine, who painted in the grand manner for the courtiers of the Grand Monarch.

The La Tour and Le Nain pictures, which are being shown this winter in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, and Detroit, are loaned from various museums and private collections including the Louvre, the Rijksmuseum of Amsterdam, and the Detroit Institute of Arts. The pictures in the grand gallery have been loaned from New York owners and from the Whitcomb, Haas, and Kanzler collections in Detroit.

The exhibition will be further supplemented by thirty drawings and water colors by Paul Cezanne and Pierre Bonnard, French painters of the last century who figured prominently in the development of modern art and so visitors to the Institute during February will see the old and the new, as well as the popular and classic, in two great centuries of French painting. Except on Thursdays an admission fee of 25 cents will be charged to the special exhibition galleries. Gallery talks will be given every day the museum is open, at 2:30 and again at 8:00 p. m. Sunday's gallery talk will be at 3:00 and for the next two Sundays the exhibition will be discussed on the Institute's radio program. The program will be broadcast at 1:00 every Sunday afternoon, over WWJ.

Birmingham before today

By Minnie Hunt Seltzer

The Horace Barnum property was north of the Morgan place and contained eleven acres. The house and lawn have previously been described.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnum were the parents of Mrs. William Bruce, (Grace Barnum) and Mrs. H. H. Healy, (George Barnum).

Mrs. Bruce has three daughters. They are: Mrs. Grace Grace, Mrs. Dennis of Los Angeles, Calif., and Mrs. E. H. Healy of Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. E. H. Healy, who is Mrs. Bruce's youngest daughter, has been married to Mr. Healy in Milwaukee, I. believe she has five grandchildren, one granddaughter and a great-grandson.

Mrs. Benedict was the mother of the late Mary Benedict, the Harrison Benedicts have been dead many years. Their home was on the farm on north side of what later became the Trowbridge farm. This is now the subdivision north of the John Benedict farm. Miss Anna Benedict lives in the old John Benedict home. Her brother Edward is dead, but I believe her sister Hattie is alive. Ed was the husband of Mrs. Minnie Bradley Bennett. She is a sister of Judson Bradley, a well known realtor. The Edward Benedict children are: Charles, John, and daughters. Their daughter Hattie is a talented dancer and is a well known instructor in rhythmic motion. Mrs. Minnie Benedict lives in Detroit.

A ditch ran along the northern boundary of the Barnum property and at the north west corner of the property stood a large oak tree. Near this tree Mr. Barnum had his blacksmith shop. Many years later the husband of Mrs. Grace Bruce, Dennis, who was a blacksmith, lived on this site. Mr. Barnum, Mr. Henry Berg and Mr. Charles J. Shain bought the property from the Bruce home and the James Todd property and built their present homes there. The Barnum house, which for many years had been the Bruce home and several other places, was moved near the street and in line with the other houses.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Berg were the parents of Catherine, Marian, Milton and Margaret. Catherine was the wife of Charles J. Shain. She died while in her early twenties.

The present Mrs. Charles J. Shain, (Ruth) is very active in civic work. She has a gracious, understanding women. The Shain store was one of the oldest established business houses in the city. Mr. Shain's hobby is horseback riding. He also enjoys a sleigh ride when there is enough snow to allow the glistering surface of the street. Across the street from the section of Pierce and facing east, is the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Blumberg. Mr. Blumberg was formerly Miss Blanche Hargan. William is the son of the late Mrs. Blumberg. His brother of Neal of Kansas City, and the late Bert Blumberg. Theo, their Clark were brothers. His mother was a member of the Ladies' Library Association and Cemetery Association.

The Mills property was north of the Bruce property. Mrs. Mills was a widow for many years. She was the mother of Samuel C. and Rowena Mills. Samuel was the father of Grace Mills. His second wife was Mrs. Jina Barrett Mills. She was the mother of Mrs. Stella Barrett Parks. Stella was the first wife of Mr. Austin Parks.

When the young folks used to skate on the mill pond, it was Grace Mills who always kept the boys gathered and kept the bonfires lighted, for the skaters. She was a time with her mother died and she stayed at her grandmother's house. My father ploughed Mrs. Mills' garden that spring and he used to tell me how Grace used to sit on the porch and cry for her mother and how sorry he was for the lonely little girl. Mrs. Mills was known by trade. He and J. Allen Bigelow and Jack Baldwin were expert fishermen and pals. Who also enjoyed a fishing trip. William Hilliard and Devo Havensport never tire of this sport and are very successful fishermen.

Bert Nixon, who was the father of Mrs. Polly Greer, and grandfather of Alice and Blanche Greer, was the town's leading hunter and trapper. Mrs. Greer was very young and a wonderful cook. I believe that the Greers lived at the north west corner of Pierce and Martin when the children were small.

NEW ARMY-NAVY STAMPS ARRIVE

Twenty Thousand Placed On Sale Past Week By Postmaster

Twenty thousand of the new Army and Navy stamp series have been received at the local post office and are now available to the public according to Postmaster Joseph A. Byrne. The stamps are about the size of special delivery stamps.

Both Army and Navy stamps are printed in red ink. The former carry as the central subject portraits of Andrew Jackson on the left and Winfield Scott on the right. Beneath the oval are the names of the war heroes on white cotton panels. Centered between the two pictures is a reproduction of Jackson's house. "The Hermitage."

The Navy issue contains the pictures of Stephen Decatur and Thomas Mac Donough. Between them is shown a warship of their time, under full sail. Both of the new stamp issues were originally available in Washington, D. C., on Jan. 15.

"HISTORY REPEATS"
A subtle poison gas with power before and in a great Alvarado.

"The entire world is mine," and sat stride
Incentive captured, straightaway conquered.

Full many others drank with power or have strode human tide.

Have home-then on, while poised in the world of the future.

Until they fell beneath the waves
they rode.

Democracy learns painfully and slow.

But having learned, that knowledge then applies
Whatever Caesar seeks its overthrow.

Comes first as friend, with promises and lies.
A serpent coiled about the throat,
can choke

A nation that will not cast off its yoke.
