Student Chatter

THE CHATTERBOX

The pugacious picture we painted of "Red" Howling last week must have had some effect on him, as was evidenced by the near-riot that marked the Birmingham-Clawson game last Friday. One of the Clawson five was unlucky enough to do the wrong thing at it hammer and tongs in just about thirty seconds. Both squads were on the floor, mulling and mixing in, and the game at hand was the least of the referee's worries. "Tiny" Forester was spoiled for a fight, and "Slim" Peabody was doing his best to help out. Both Howling and the Clawson boys were banished from the game before the floor was cleared and play resumed.

We noticed that Mr. Howling, "Red's" father, who was seated in the middle of the second row on the left side of the floor, was one of the first to get out of the court when the trouble started, despite the fact that he had to climb over Mr. Robinson and Mr. Jim Lavelle, who was seated on the floor. Must be that the Irish run in the family. Incidentally, Mr. Howling seldom misses a game, and with Miss McGinnis, one of the team's most loyal rooters.

One of the athletic awards which seems to have lost out with the students in the Johnson Memorial Plaque. In our opinion, this plaque is significant of the highest honor that an athlete can gain at Baldwin. The names of the boys inscribed on the plaque read like a list of Baldwin's all-time greats in the sporting field. Harris, Schwartz, Hunt, and the rest all have left an indelible mark on our sports annals and in scholarship.

It bears the reason that in recent years interest in the plaque has declined is that it is a student-athlete award. This means that a boy not only must excel in sports, he must stand out academically, rank high in his class. This has been the case that has kept the names of some great athletes off the plaque. Another reason might be that the tendency is to favor boys who are not star athletes to concentrate on one sport in hopes of sooner or later standing out in that particular field. A boy whose name is inscribed on the plaque must be an all-around athlete and a good student; he must represent his school with real honor.

There is one other thing of a strong possibility that some boy now in school will have his name listed with the rest. Don Clark has already annexed letters in football and golf, and seems assured of being awarded a basketball letter this spring. If Clark can finish out in one other major sport, either track or baseball, he is virtually assured of making the Johnson Award. Golf is ranked as only a minor sport, but probably should count when considerations are made for the honor. Clark's academic record stands high in his class, and he has stamped himself as a leader in school affairs.

There are several other boys in the field who would, by branching out and taking up several other sports, stand a good chance of making the Award before they graduate. We, for one, would like to see this fine award come back into its rightful place of honor and prestige in the school, and nothing can help more to do this than to have some boy receive the award this year. No one has been named for the honor since Fred Schwartz secured it in 1934.

Orchids To Bill Price for his fine presence of mind in the emergency last week. Charles Boynton for a fine valedictorian address. Mr. Toothacker for his active interest and hard work in getting the new projector for the school, even to the point of working by himself late at night, making temporary curtains for the gym to save the school the cost of buying them. Loren Macdonald for the way he found his shooting eye in the Clawson game. Neil Stark on general principles.

MAROONS WIN ROUGH GAME

Two Baldwin Players Ousted At Clawson Five Bows 32-14, Friday

In a fast, rough, hot-temperament game that saw two of the local boys ousted by the referee for fighting, the Birmingham Jacks-balls team defeated the Clawson team by a score of 32 to 14 on the home court Friday evening. The game was four minutes old before either team scored, and with the exception of a one point lead which Clawson held 46 two minutes in the first quarter, the home boys were in the lead constantly.

The first quarter ended 4-2 in favor of the locals. Langerman and Clark netted 12 shots, 10 of which were made. The rest of the game was a struggle with a tricky shot under the basket. Clawson let loose a barrage of shots in the middle of the period.

Schwartz of Clawson ran the length of the floor to open the second quarter and to tie the score. Things began to happen. Baldwin let loose a barrage of shots connecting on every other one. Clawson would bring the ball down the floor only to miss, and miss consistently, and then Birmingham would go back down the floor and force the rebound into the iron doughnut with the fist net. Loren Macdonald, Baldwin's young man who is playing ball at such a tender age that your children may watch him play someday, played a good game of ball for Baldwin and rarely missed the basket, ending up high point man with 12 points. Adams and MacDonald did most of the scoring in this period. Fitz making his, called foul on the home boys. When the ball finally rolled under the ceiling was about ready to come down. The whole auditorium was a complete madhouse. The basketball game engrossed the floor, with the tables overturning 10 to 6 in favor of the guests from Birmingham.

After ten minutes rest the contestants resumed play. The Maroons sank two baskets and then Clawson let a little too much rally and Birmingham made one more basket to finish the third quarter still in the lead 24 to 11.

This period resembled a basketball game and the teams fought as teams managed to make a few points. However, when the referee started the final quarter the natural instincts began to show. It was a close, heated, with occasional streaks of snappy ball. Lay, and MacDonald popped in two baskets for the Maroons and Stevens one for Clawson. Clawson called time. After being knocked out-of-bounds, Lay came up with fists clenched and in a fighting mood only to be sent to the showers by the referee before any damage was done.

The game carried on peacefully for two or three seconds and then the boys started to whip it up again. The crowd was in pandemonium, hats were flying around like bee's around a hive and probably only the cost of the headgear prevented hats from being tossed into the ring. In the midst of all this a basketball game was being played. Adams and Clark were able to make a couple of baskets. As the game warmed up, the referee turned around and swung at one of his erstwhile opponents but missed, that was enough, however, to irritate the players, and spectators out on the floor. The mass surge-but almost crushing the referee in his path. Five minutes later when everything was quiet and quiet except for the shouting and howling on players' benches. Howling went tense and waiting to play out the remaining two seconds. The highly anticipated game ended 32 to 14 in favor of the Birmingham grapplers.

FLOOR BURNS

BALDWIN HIGH SCHOOL

Coach Whitney went into the game last Friday night aching for revenge for the unfair circumstances imposed on the team at the Birmingham game last week. He felt that the team had been treated unfairly and that the game was a sham. He decided to let the team know that he was not going to let them off easily. He wanted to see if they were really as good as they claimed to be. He wanted to see if they were really as good as they claimed to be. He wanted to see if they were really as good as they claimed to be.

Just a little disgusted with his regulars for holding passes, Coach Whitney gave several second chances to a chance in the game after Birmingham had assumed a strangle hold. Chief of these was Charles Hallett, who saw action for the first time. Charley acquired himself well and showed Coach that he deserves another chance to play with the regulars.

Others who saw action were Donnie Upward, "Andy" Andrews, and Loren Macdonald, who celebrated by hanging in probably points to lead the night's scores.

"Andy" also played a bang-up game, energetically and literally. The Clawson players gave him the works, and Andy fought himself out on the floor more than once. He retained his beating odds of his on their heads in the form of points on the scoreboard, which is as good a way as any we know.

Baldwin's next game will be with East Detroit, at East Detroit, which is a long way from these knocked-out-of-bounds, Lay

Now for a few dots and scratches from that Basketball game Friday night in which the Marples came out on top.

Betty Keen knitted industriously as Bob Andrews and Loren Macdonald piled up points for good old B. H. S. Jack Bell yelled as his friend Dick Erwin carried off on out on the floor.

Barbara Rupp and Jean Carol Holmes also did a little bit of cheering their vocal cords along with Chris Smith, Helen Shaver, Dorothy Freeman, Margaret Gardner, Rhonda Melbury and Jack Heynolds, Bill Manning, Ann Miller and El Sonor Summe Brady.
