PARAGRAPHS

Chance for Revenue: Maybe the Federal debt could be wiped out by a tax on straw votes.—Burlington Hawkeye-Gazette.

Sociological Note: If customers ever become as polite as salespeople, that will be a counter-revolution.—Toronto Star.

Life in the U. S. A.: Young lads who used to run away from home have to be careful in this trailer era, that the opposite doesn't occur.—Syracuse Herald.

Toothpicks: When food made of wood comes into general use, toothpick chewing will come under the head of eating between meals.—Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader.

Spanish Bull: It seems strange that the Madrid bulls have not run amuck, since we have always understood they went haywire at the sight of red flags.—Wyoming State Tribune.

Warning: Before starting the Fall fire in the heating stove, be careful to remove the roll of $20 bills you laid away for Winter expenses.—Toledo Blade.

Under the Table: The report that women's shoes will be more pointed this year has been received with some concern in male bridge circles.—Grand Island Independent.

Intelligible: The man who drives his car at 60 miles an hour with one hand while he lights a cigarette with the other is not in line for an old-age pension.—Council Bluffs Journal.

Motor Sports: Some reckless motorists think they're good sports because they first flush the pedestrian with a rotten blast of the horn and then take him on the free.—Atlanta Journal.

Pinch Hitter: Clark Gable qualifies as an authority on ball English anyhow. He insists that since a pinch-hitter is supposed to be a better batter than the regular, all these "pinch-hitters" have been incorrectly designated.—Winston-Salem Journal.

Mixed a Guessing Game: The cancellation of plans for a heavy weight championship fight in New York last Summer was a setback to the sports writers. It robbed them of a chance for one more wrong guess before the season closed.—Scranton Times.

Jest For Fun

"How do you like my new boxing gloves?" "They're knock out!"

Tightwad: Polly—When Freddie and Elsie came back from the bridal trip he still had $2.50 in his pocket. Jesse—The stinky thing!

"Can you swim?" "No." "You poor fish."

Really Lovely: Lieutenant (groaning with rage)—Who told you to put those flowers on the table? Steward—The commander, sir. Lieutenant—Pretty, aren't they?

Real Estate Agent—Now here is a house without a flaw. Harvard Graduate—Goodness, what do you walk on?

Settled: "And fan you could the way my mother does?" "Sure, if you can stand indignity the way your father did."

"I have a picture of you in my mind all the time." "How small you make me feel."

Be Sure: Hotel Page—Telegram for Mr. Niedepondivavani, Mr. Niedepondivavani. Mr. Niedepondivavani—What initial, please?

"They say Phaton was killed by a thunderbolt hurled at him." "Exactly."

Labor Trouble: "What time is it by your watch?" "It's been after." "After what?" "I don't know, I had to lay one of the hands off."

"How did you know my father was a delinquent?" "Well, you said you got all your good looks from him."

Of Course: Teacher—Tymme, why do they mock of the Civil War, or an uprising as a revolution? Bright Pupil—'Cause they go around and around.

"It's the train gets in at four-thirty." "Well, I'll be at the station at five-thirty." "It's thirty." "Yes, Helen is always an hour late, whatever she does."

No Help Wanted: "That's a good little boy," said the visitor, as Johnny picked up his scattered toys. "I suppose your mother has promised you something if you clean up the room." "I don't," he corrected her.
