STAR DUST

Movie Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

OVER at the Paramount studio you are just a wallflower if you don't know your American history. Directors, players, authors and any visitors who happen to be around swap stories about pioneer days, and anyone brash enough to mention current events, like who won the second race at Santa Anita, or what happened last night at a cafe, is quickly squelched.

To the great success of 'The plainman' goes the credit—for the blame—for all this prattle in the past. The company is so enthusiastic over that picture, and the forthcoming 'Head of Steam' that they are delving into history for their next big production. 'I, James Lewis,' the story of the early days of the Wells-Fargo express.

Actors are apt to be a pretty gloomy and pessimistic lot when you know them well. They are a little worrying because the career of an actor is apt to be short, always pointing out men in the extra ranks who only a few years ago were stars. Now they are the subject of their own pictures, just signed a new contract with Columbia to make six Westerns a year.

For weeks Clark Gable has been completely mystified by receiving high offers for the decrepit old Ford Carole Lombard sent him as a valentine last year. Now the truth is out. A Mr. Brown of Richmond, Virginia, wants to buy it for exhibition at County Fairs. But Clark won't let his mistress Carole give him permission.

Instead of raving about Henry Ford and Sylvia Sydney in the gripping, tragic 'You Only Live Once' Hollywoodians come up with the theater making up silly couplets. That is what the company gets for dispensing with grammar in the title. One of Henry's best friends said, 'You Live Only Once' may be more grammatical, but 'You Live Only Once' is very dramatic!'

Susan Fleming thought that she had retired from the screen when she married Harpo Marx, but she made the mistake of stopping in at the studio to have luncheon with her husband, and first thing she knew the director called out, 'That girl over there—she's just what I've been looking for.' So she is playing in 'A Day at the Races' with her husband and his giddy brothers.

Ginger Rogers is not only the most popular girl in Hollywood these days; she is the most surprising. Night after night she is out dancing with one or her many beaux—Jimmy Stewart, or Cary Grant, or the visiting socialite, Alfred Vandenberg, and she gaily hasn't stopped her from breaking into a new career. She has written a song called 'I Can't Understand.' Maybe you heard Fred Astaire introduce it over the air recently. That is team work for you.
