KITCHEN KORNER

By Sally Lunn

Dear Daughters:—Your last letter to father and me was so full of the way times you have been having, that I thought you might like a little book to help you on your spring housecleaning tasks. Your grandmother, I'm afraid, still thinks of me as an inexperienced young bride, for not long ago she sent me a little book of tried and true household hints. I laughed when I first saw it, but after I had read the first page I decided it was too good a thing to give up, even to you. However, since I've tried everything I'm going to tell you, and can guarantee that it will work, you too will reap some benefit from this marvelous little book.

What with your golf, picnics and chaperon, your little house may be sadly in need of cleaning. Try some of these handy little tricks when you buckle down to work.

You can clean a stair carpet without having to take it up if you do this. After you have thoroughly swept the carpet, add two to three teaspoons of ammonia to a pail of warm water. Wring a large towel out in this mixture and spread it over the steps. Then beat with a small carpet beater. Rinse the cloth out every time you have used it all ones. This method will remove dirt and restore color to the carpet.

While I have you on the carpet, as that slangy young brother of yours might say, here's a good way to remove grease and dirt spots from your nice rugs. All you have to do is rub dampened cornstarch into the soiled nap and leave it there for about 48 hours. When you brush it out, all the grease and mud will come loose.

An excellent furniture polish is a mixture of equal parts of alcohol, olive oil and pure cedar vinegar. Shake it well before using, and if you rub persistently, it will remove spots left on tables by hot dishes, damp glasses, etc.

Here's something to help you brighten up your kitchen. Remove all the spots on the painted woodwork with a cloth dipped in kerosene. For dirty brass marks, dip a piece of bannel in paraffin oil, and rub, gently, then wipe with a cloth wrung out in hot water. This is more effective and much better than soap, which destroys the paint.

Just in case you still have some winter clothes to pack away, my little book can help you with them too. Sprinkle whole cloves plentifully among the articles, and ground cloves on the shelves and in the corners of your closet. Dried orange peel is also very good, and both it and the cloves leave a pleasant odor. In case your husband prefers something a little less fragrant, sprinkle small lumps of red sulphur or brimstone in his clothes. These are equally effective remedies, and leave no odor at all.

I haven't much time to write more, but here are a couple of great helps when you and Jack take your week-end trips. This summer, instead of bothering to pack a slimy cake of soap in your suitcase, pack a cake of shaving soap. It is much more easily packed, and one of the best cleansers I know. When you wash in strange wash rooms and want to remove your rings, first remove a hairpin from your hair. Strive the rings on the hairpin, and stick it firmly back in your hair. This will prevent you from losing them, and even though you may startle Jack by forgetting to remove them until he tells you about them, you at least won't run any danger of leaving them behind.

These hints, but with much love and from father too.—Mother

DETROIT ANTIQUE EXHIBITION OPENS

Preview Of Annual Show Possible On Monday Evening

With the most modern trend turning towards antique fairs and expositions, and with the enthusiasm of antique lovers reaching a new high this year, Detroit will hold its Second Annual Antique Show in the Naval Armory, May 18 to May 22, from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. The Colony Club is sponsoring a preview of the show on Monday, May 17, from 9:00 until 11:00 p. m.

If it is true that the last shall be first, maintains a prominent Detroit collector whose ruling passion is collecting lovely relics of bygone days, then a taste for antiques is the modern one to have.

A look at the list of some of the featured collections is enough to make even a layman's mouth water, and those who actually know anything about antiques will find the exhibition a veritable Paradise. Old silver, jewelry, glass, china, porcelain, pewter, bronzes, mechanical banks, Indian relics, mineral stones, furniture and stamps will be displayed in profusion, with especially rare items too numerous to mention.

Anyone who wishes to attend the preview Monday evening, and avoid the crowds, will be welcome to do so. Tickets may be procured by calling a member of the Colony Club or by stopping at the Clubhouse, which is only two doors east of the Armory. Door tickets may also be purchased.

The Advisory Committee for the show include the names of some of the prominent figures in the world of collectors and collections, as does the list of patrons. On the latter is included the name of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron H. Webster, of Fairfax Drive.
