Birmingham before today

By Minnie Hunt Salzer

Between Hilltop street and West Maple avenue there were no houses facing on Bates street. The little brick house on the east side of Bates street between W. Maple avenue and Martin street was the home of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Logan and their two daughters, Mona and Zona, when I first remember the house. The other residents were Mr. and Mrs. Almond Parks and their eldest daughter, Mrs. Parks was the former Miss Bertha Flynn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Flynn. A man named Faxon Troche, was another occupant and for several years Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Crowe lived here. Mrs. Crowe was a Birmingham merchant. Mrs. Cowan was an active member of Birmingham Ladies Literary Club of Birmingham. Mr. Cowan was the village band leader for a long time and the band used to practice in the old town hall at the northwest corner of Bates and Merrill streets.

Mrs. Salzer

The house at the southwest corner of Bates and Martin streets belonged to Mrs. Corey, mother of Mrs. Hanna Corey and Mrs. Ida Sabin, and step-mother of Mr. Ben Corey. I believe that a Mr. Eddy and daughter, Marian were often guests of Mrs. Corey. I wonder how many residents recall the little white mountain ash trees which grew outside the walk between the Corey house and the town hall. They were not tall trees but were very beautiful.

The next house facing Bates street was on the west side, between Merrill and Townsend streets. This was built by Mr. A. D. Shaboldt and was at one time the home of Mrs. Crosby and her daughter, Delia. (Mrs. Marsaw) who was a teacher in the Intermediate Dept. of Hill School. Mrs. Crosby was a dear old lady, who often sat in her easy chair by the window while she smoked her white clay pipe with as much enjoyment as the women and girls of today smoke their cigarettes. Delia Crosby was very energetic and when not busy at school or in the home she would be found working in the yard and Stella Ward and I used to stop and visit with her. Another woman with whom we often visited was Miss Alemeda Blount, who lived on the northwest corner of Bates and Townsend. Other residents of the Shaboldt house were Mr. and Mrs. Groovy and daughter Mabel, and finally the property became the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Hulbert and daughter Zada. I believe that Zada now lives on Henrietta street.

The house that stands on the southwest corner of Townsend and Bates, really faces on Bates street. I described it when writing the history of Townsend street.

Between W. Brown street and Lincoln avenue on the west side, there was the Cinderella Patch home, the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hall and the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jarvis. Later Mr. Thomas Koonitz built a home on the lot south of the Patch property. Then there was a house built between the Koonitz home and the Patch house. Mr. Koonitz bought the property on the corner of W. Brown and Bates, and this house was moved to the corner lot and enlarged and was faced on W. Brown street.

Some of the occupants of the house before it was moved were Mr. and Mrs. William Hathaway and family and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Bungan and family. Mr. Hattie Koonitz is the widow of the late Thomas Koonitz and mother of Mrs. Hattie Roy, son of David Roy. Edith Thick and grandmother of Miss Virginia Roy. Her parents were Mr. and Mrs. John Hall who were also the parents of Mrs. Emma Schlaack and Miss Anna Hall. Mrs. Roy is the widow of the late Lewis Roy, son of David Roy. She once taught in the Hill school and for a number of years has been principal of the Bagley school in Pontiac. Her daughter Virginia is also employed by the Pontiac Board of Education.

Mrs. Thick is the wife of Fred C. Thick and has had many years of teaching experience having taught in Ovid, Mich., during the superintendency of E. F. Waldo. She has also taught in Idaho, Salt Lake City, Utah and Flint.

Miss Yvonne Koonitz, Mrs. Emma Schlaack and Miss Anna Hall were all successful teachers. Miss Hall was a teacher in the Grammar Department of Hill school for many years and was much beloved by the majority of her pupils. She was a splendid Math teacher and taught Math in the High school while still in charge of the Grammar Room. Mr. Thomas Koonitz was an expert upholsterer, drapery and carpenter work. He was also a painter and decorator. I used to enjoy watching him work the while he told me of Colorado and other places where he had lived. He was very kind and had many real friends in Birmingham and vicinity.

KITCHEN KORNER

By Sally Lann

Dear Diary:
 How the hours fly around when one is keeping house! I think I have my day all planned, I try to be orderly and rhythmic in my way of living, but I seem to be getting nowhere fast. No sooner do I get started doing what I am supposed to do, than someone drops in, or the telephone rings, or there are other interruptions. Then I find myself wondering what I started to do in the first place.

But nothing shall interfere with that time of day I have set aside to write down household hints in my diary. I find it such an easy way to learn. I never realized how much detail there is to keeping house until I started to do it alone. Of course, Mother did all those little things at home without even thinking about them. I wonder if I will ever be as capable and competent as Mother!

Well, at least, I am trying. Now for instance, here's something I learned last evening. Jack and I were invited to the Willards for a tea party. Oh! Was it good! Alice said it wasn't really a "party" because she cooked the fish in the oven.

I discovered her secret, because I arrived early and slipped out in the kitchen. First, she dipped the fish in heavily salted milk, then in cracker crumbs. Next she placed it in a shallow pan, and sprinkled it with oil, and finally she browned it in a very hot oven.

For salad, I watched her chop green peppers and mix with mayonnaise. This she spread thickly over the tomato slices, placed lettuce leaves. She topped it off, by dropping tiny pearl onions on the tomato slices. I just did the right salad for a dish dinner. Then we had asparagus. Alice told me to wash it at its best, soak whole. She drained it carefully, seasoned it lightly, and when dinner was ready, she served it in a hot dish with plenty of butter.

I forgot to mention the potatoes. I heard somewhere or other that new potatoes could not be baked. But I learned from my hostess that she boils them first until they are almost done. Then she bakes in a hot oven for only 20 minutes.

To finish a perfect meal, we had strawberry shortcake for dessert. I learned something about this, too. In the early spring when berries may be somewhat tasteless, their flavor is improved by adding a little orange juice. Alice washed them before baking. Then she sweetened them and let them stand awhile. When she crushed them, she added the orange juice. So, I really have learned quite a bit.—A Bride—
