

BACK FENCING

By A MAN ABOUT TOWN

The North Woods is on, and hundreds of cars can be seen daily returning from the hunt. Some are draped with the "hard to get" buck, and others (many others) have nothing but a heavy coating of mud to show for their dash into the north country.

Charles James, Elmer Huston, and G. R. Averill traveled over a thousand miles on their trip for deer. They hid away in the wilderness in the vicinity of Watermeet. The banker and the hardware man both proved themselves to be Deer Hunters, but G. R. A. again proved that as a hunter he is an honest-to-goodness fisherman.

Tickets are still being handed out for overtime parking, "wrong side of the road" parking and numerous other minor traffic violations. The campaign is a reasonable one, so it would be well for all of you local drivers to cooperate with the local police and... save yourselves the rather unpleasant surprise of finding a ticket on your car when you step up to drive it away.

John B. (Jack) Taylor is already getting the litters over a new assignment which he has been given. On Friday, December 3rd, at 1:00 p. m., he will top before the mike at Station WEXL and dwell on the advantages of the Safety Program now being sponsored by the State Highway Department. It is a new venture to have Earl Gasgill, one of the head men over at Sifer's Market had gone absent. While seated on the run-way awaiting the approach of a buck, he fell asleep... yes—sound asleep. So soundly did he sleep, so the story goes, that he was not aware of the fact that one of the antlered herd was browsing right around his sanctuary. Finally the deer, being an inquisitive animal, nudged Earl in the back with his nice little spike. Earl awoke in a flash and spun around and grabbed the buck by its horns. A furious battle followed, during which the buck lashed out with his front feet and fairly tore the pants off the valiant hunter. At last, Earl managed to reach his hunting knife and with one great lunge he buried the knife to the hilt in the neck of the buck. His battle won, he dressed out the deer, retied his nose, and in a moment he has been holding open house while the deer is on exhibition... not a bullet wound in sight... only the gash left by his trusty knife being visible. Now that's the story. Our informer swears it's true and says that Earl is willing to show the buck as proof.

That's TOO much for us to present and still have breath left, so, we'll just drop back in our chair and wait for normal respiration to return. SO-Long!

IS BARBARY INEVITABLE?

(The Christian Science Monitor) All has not yet been said that ought to be said about the spraying of Ethiopia with poison gas by the slaughter of Chinese civilians far behind the fighting lines. The world has expressed its horror; it has talked about measures to stop or limit the fighting which produce such outrages; but little about tracing them to their prime cause—the mentality which makes it possible for human beings to engage in war in this kind of way. In the name of candor it has been laid down as an axiom that since war is a wicked thing in its nature, a nation engaged in war and fighting for its existence will stick at nothing and will be deterred by no scruples whatsoever from committing any atrocity which will break down the physical power and morale of its enemy. Thus we are assured that however terrible and contrary to the individual human conscience certain actions are, nevertheless in war they will be committed.

Peaceable and peace-loving persons, advocating peace measures, have asserted again and again that these and all the worst imaginable horrors are inevitable in war. Stanley Baldwin, two years ago, when announcing the need for increasing Britain's air-force, drew a gloomy picture of the nature of several attacks in the next week. The London Times, only a few weeks ago, in speaking of the ruthless action of the Japanese in attacking non-combatants, blamed them rather for having precipitated war than for their conduct in the war—appearing to admit that ruthlessness, when once war has been declared, is inevitable.

The question arises whether thoughtful persons in civilized countries ought to tolerate these things for their conduct in the war about the inevitability of unlimited barbarism in war—and whether these admissions do not promote the very evil that is deplored. It is, it is no good to shelter our-realistic, the "inevitable" view of war's barbarities, then we are perforce those with a moral excuse. Public opinion should be discouraged from drifting into this dangerous error, even while it is being educated against the dangerous error of drifting into war.

A London coroner is telling the story of a death certificate which reached him recently. In the column reserved for "cause of death" the doctor had signed his own name. The coroner returned the certificate with a note which said: "This may be true, but don't you think we had better have some scientific reasons as well?" Weekly News (Auckland, N. Z.)
