KITCHEN KORNER

By Sally Lunn

Dear "Fellow-Housewives":

If only appetites would go down when food prices go up! But they don't, I've noticed. Right now meat is a problem. I try to solve the situation by combining small portions of meat with other rich, nutritious foods that have body-building elements. I sound like a cook book, but that's exactly what I mean.

Scouting around for satisfying dishes that really constitute a meal in themselves, I discovered this one. It combines the good old lima bean with sausages. There's one good thing about lima beans from the standpoint of economy, one may buy them very reasonably either in cans or dried. In either form they are a concentrated food and exceedingly valuable to the diet.

Limas and Sausage

Dried lima beans need not be soaked, if slowly heated in cold water, and cooked over a low flame. Here's how to cook limas with sausage: You need one-half pound of sausage, 1 medium-sized onion, 1 cup of cooked, dried limas, 1 cup tomatoes, one-half teaspoon chili, one-half teaspoon salt. Fry the onion and sausage until well done. Add other ingredients and simmer for 30 minutes.

Doesn't that sound good? It can be made very reasonably too, and will be a satisfying dish for the most ravenous of appetites. I would serve something green along with this, like spinach. Or, another idea. Have you ever tried celery cabbage?

It's on the market right now, is cheap and goes a long way. It can be served with boiled dressing, French dressing or mayonnaise. It is a little change from the old stand-by Cole slaw, and really quite a delicacy.

To Bake Pears

And now what for dessert? The whole meal sounds like fall, so why not keep it in "character." There's nothing that reminds one more of autumn than the spicy odor of pears stewing in syrup, flavored with cinnamon. So how about them? Or perhaps baked pears—they're a little different.

To bake hard pears, remove blossom end and place in a casserole with 2 cups of water and one-half cup of sugar. Cover and bake slowly two hours or until soft. I find that breaking a stick of cinnamon into the casserole improves the flavor. Better still, if you have a small tea-ball handy, break stick cinnamon into it, and place in the casserole with the pears. This method flavors more evenly.

Now top off the meal with a hot-water ginger bread. After the ginger bread is baked, cut marshmallows in half, and set them on top, place in the broiler for a few minutes, or until marshmallows melt slightly and brown.

Yours,
Sally.

Reading Group Acts On Books For Year

The Book Club—the particular one which has the novel plan of auctioning off books each year to raise funds for the purchase of a new supply—is getting into action again.

Members met Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Howard Donnelly of Bloomfield Hills. A committee was chosen, with Mrs. Lewis B. Sappington as chairman, to select books for the coming year's perusal. Assisting her will be Mrs. Louis J. Giffels, Mrs. Donnelly, Mrs. Charles M. Drake and Paul Neal Averill.

This week's meeting will be held Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Drake of Pilgrim road, when the committee will make its final reading choice.

As a result of the recent book auction, more than 50 percent of the original cost of the books was realized—and so thrifty members will buy books and cut dues.

PINE LAKE PLANS FALL STYLE SHOW

Samovars Will Add Russian Note To Tea Table Done In Brass

Fall fashions and flowers will bloom Friday at Pine Lake Country Club when the club's autumn style show is presented under auspices of the women's entertainment committee, of which Mrs. T. Bruce Knight of Detroit is chairman.

The guests will be seated at small tables, decorated with colorful flowers of the season, while equally colorful frocks are viewed as models promenade round about the tables.

The bright tints of autumn will be reflected also in the tea table, to be done in the Russian manner. At either end of the table will be a samovar, and centering it will be a low brass bowl filled with vari-colored petunias. Tall brass candlesticks holding ivory tapers will add to the decorative scheme of the table.

As a novelty, a special feature has been added to the afternoon's program. A presentation of the Rhumba as danced in the colorful South American manner by Miss Patty Nelson and Burt Church of New York City.

Among the Birmingham women making early reservations, are Mrs. Charles O. Ball, Mrs. William McCallum, Mrs. H. D. Harris, Mrs. H. D. Wise and Mrs. B. H. Anibal.

Birmingham members of the entertainment committee include Mrs. Anibal, Mrs. Louis J. Giffels, Mrs. Wise and Mrs. Harry Vaughn.
