'Know Your Community' Theme of First Program for A. A. U. W.

With Mrs. Franklin Fricker as the new president, the Birmingham branch of the American Association of University Women will begin its season with a meeting and tea Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Leigh Lynch of Fairfax road.

The program will be of particular interest because of its local aspect. It will be in the form of a panel discussion by nine members on the "Know Your Community" theme. The idea, which originated with the University of Michigan, was adapted to the A. A. U. W. program by Miss Marion McClench, director of the State Department of Instruction, and chairman of education for the state branch of the Association.

Alpha Phis Fete Coeds Of Future

College is just around the corner, so near that those who have already lived through that thrilling experience are almost as excited as the members of the class of 1941. A group of alumnae and active members of Alpha Phi sorority were the guests last night of Marjorie Kidder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Kidder, in her home on Brown street, where they revisited old memories and anticipated new experiences. Alpha Phi in the group, besides Miss Kidder, included Sally Baker, Betty Peabody, Betty Spinning, Harriet Brelsford, Carol Dweley and Mary Ellen MacMahon, of Detroit. Younger sisters and friends of theirs, all of whom plan to attend Michigan State College this fall, incidentally, were Joan Baker, Virginia Farrar, Noel Dweley, Janet Hart and Marjorie Baldwin.

SOCIAL BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Golling of Gengary, Ill. returned Monday after spending the week-end at the St. Clair Flats. Mrs. Ella Smalley, Mrs. Golling's mother, who accompanied them, will remain at the Flats until the end of the week. Mr. and Mrs. Golling will have as their guests, Mr. Golling's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Golling of Evanston, Ill., who are coming to attend the Harris Small wedding in Grosse Pointe, Sept. 17.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey F. Cornwell and their son, Harvey, Jr., of Linden road were guests for the week-end and holiday of Mrs. Cornwell's father, Dean Mortimer E. Conoley of Ann Arbor. Mrs. Cornwell and her son spent the months of July and August at Lake Glandaugus, N. Y., where they were joined week-ends by Mr. Cornwell.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Penfield of Lake Park drive were guests for the week-end of Prof. and Mrs. William Lyon Phelps at their summer home at Huron City near Aux Barques.

Clark Collins was host to a Saturday of the school set Saturday evening at his family's farm on Deer Lake. Following swimming, there was dancing in the barn. The guests were Frances Chandler, Joan Baker, Helen Shaver, Mayme Gray, Mrs. G. W. Trumb, Dorothy Mathews, Bill Bigger, Pete Rose, Don Clark, George Frye and Bob Harrington.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. P. John and their family including Constance, Colin and Jerry John, of Tooting Lane, and Bill Lewis, were guests at the Old Club at the St. Clair Flats for the Labor Day week-end.

Lucy Preston of Madison avenue was hostess at luncheon at Devon Gables Wednesday at a happy-lending luncheon for a group of fledglings who will try their wings in college this fall. Most of the guests are Michigan State-bound including Marjorie Baldwin, Virginia Farrar, Noel Dweley, Barbara Sears, Betty Spinning—the only full-fledged sophomore in the crowd. Others with various destinations were Patricia Blackmore who is going to Duke University, Barbara Martin, who will enter the University of Wisconsin, and Virginia Thompson and Betty Miller.

The Kitchen Korner

By Sally Lunn

Tea was over and the guests lingered informally for those last remarks sometimes more interesting than general conversation and bridal chatter.

Mrs. Wentworth placed her tea cup on the table and joined the hostess and a group at the door.

"Do I have to bribe the cook, or will you tell me how those delicious little tea cakes were made, my dear?" she asked.

"You don't need to offer any bribes, but I'm willing to bet you a dollar you can't guess what's in them!" the hostess told her.

"I'll take you up on that—if you've really got a dollar!"

"All right, I'll give you three guesses."

"Only three, and I have to give you a dollar if I guess wrong three times, and hit it right the fourth?"

"No more, no less," laughed the hostess.

Others had gathered around, and listened in amusement and curiosity.

"You'd better give me a few more to sample before I take this big chance," Mrs. Wentworth walked to the table and helped herself to a plate of the delicacies.

"That's not fair! Elsie Wentworth, if you eat all those sweet cookies, you'll have to spend the rest of your life dieting," objected one of the guests, in mock concern.

"Well, as long as it's a taste-testing contest, why be so exclusive about it," laughed another. "Why don't you pass them around? We'll all get in on 'em. Cookies, I'm ready to make my first guess," announced Mrs. Wentworth. "They are made with nuts—chopped very fine."

"Wrong. One strike on you, Elsie," her hostess told her.

"One more cookie, and I'll hit the bull's eye. I know, they're made with chopped coconut."

"Strike two. I can see that dollar coming my way."

"Watch your step, Elsie, this is your last chance," warned the group laughingly.

Mrs. Wentworth helped herself to another little square and munched thoughtfully. "Well, am I dumb, why didn't I think of that before?" Corn flakes rolled out, "fine!" she finally exclaimed in triumph.

"Give me the dollar, darling. Three strikes and you're out. These cookies are made with—you'll laugh, it's so simple—oatmeal."

"Oatmeal?" chorused the group.

"Believe it or not. They're the quickest and simplest things. All you need is a quart of cup of butter, three-fourths cup of brown sugar, and a cup and three quarters of quick oats. Mix it together—spread mixture in a greased, shallow cake tin, and cut in squares. Bake 10 minutes. And that's all there is to it."

Club Notes

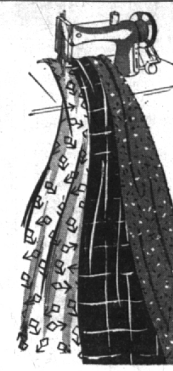

Mrs. W. A. P. John of Tooting Lane was hostess Wednesday at luncheon for members of the state committee of the American Association of University Women.
