

THIS AND THAT

(Continued from Page 1, Part 1) think that people who cannot believe that physical education, general shop work, journalism, a camera club, or such other school activities definitely contribute to the wholesome development of a child, merely and merely should re-think the problem of education—and re-think it on the basis of facts which have been proved by research, and which are in practice generally throughout the United States.

And so there you are, folks. Parents and school officials have talked much about the problem of educating modern youth. I sometimes wonder if a partial solution cannot be found by asking the students themselves just what they think unnecessary and ill-adapted to their current needs. We might be surprised at the answers they may give.

With Spring now having arrived, and the increased use of public highways by children, it seems fitting to have an editorial recently published in the Illinois State Register, written by Phil Braniff, of Oklahoma City, here it is:

Today my daughter, who is seven years old, started school as usual. She wore a dark blue dress with a white collar. She had on black shoes and wore blue gloves. Her teacher, whose name is "Scott," sat on the front bench and whined his canine head in the fall of education as she waved "good-by," and started off to the halls of learning. Tonight we talked about school. She told about the girl who sits in front of her—the girl with yellow curls—and the boy across the aisle who makes funny faces. She told me about her teacher who has eyes in the back of her head—and about the trees in the school yard—and about the big girl who doesn't believe in Santa Claus. We talked about a lot of things—tremendously vital, unimportant things; things which should be well read and understood—and then to bed.

She's back there now—back in the nursery—sound asleep with "Princess Elizabeth" (that's of old) cuddled in her right arm. You guys, would that boy would you? You see, I'm her daddy. When her eye is broken or her finger is cut, or her head gets bumped, I can fix it—but when she starts to school, when she walks across the street, then she's in your hands.

She's a nice kid. She can run like a deer and dart about like a chipmunk. She likes to ride horses and swim and hike with me on Sunday afternoons. But I can't be with her all the time—I have to work to pay for her clothes and her education. So please help me look out for her. Please drive carefully, please drive slowly past the schools and intersections—and please remember that children run from behind parked cars. Please, don't run over my little girl.

A FATHER.
P. S.—We ask you drivers to please let this sink deep into your minds as no doubt you have loved ones at home also.

Action In 'Dulcy' Smacks Of Three-Ring Circus

Action in "Dulcy" progresses simultaneously in several parts of the stage, as this rehearsal shot of the cast from the Village Players shows. The three-act production, which will be open to the public, will be presented at the Playhouse for three nights, April 21-23. Reading from left to right, Warren Pease, Jr., means a bit grim as he confronts Mrs. M. W. Cochran, who plays the title role. The resigned expression on the buxer, played by Charles D. McCall, indicates what outsiders think of the slightly insane family. The characters played by Mrs. Howard T. Woods, the Dr. John B. Haslam pursue a course of young love with the usual cliché of lovers, while Mrs. C. Howard Donnelly, seated, seems to have collapsed under the strain. She is being consoled by Claud L. Gray.

Puppet Club of Junior Girls Presents Easter Playlet At Two Performances

Puppeteering as an avocation has been adopted by a group of Birmingham girls, ranging from eight to 14 years in age, who call themselves "The Puppet Club."

Wednesday afternoon, the Club presented an Easter program, entitled "Peter Rabbit's Secret," by Joyce Watkins, a club member, at the Adams School before an assembly composed of grades from the Kindergarten to the sixth. The program was given under direction of the Club leaders, Barbara Broese and Annemarie Thraeber, both Baldwin High School students.

This evening the Club will stage the same program with additional dances, at the Oakland County

FIND ANCIENT TOOTH

A perfectly preserved mastodon tooth, measuring 4 1/2 by 3 1/4 inches has been found in a mail pail on the farm of Seymour Rose in Hamilton township, Van Buren county. It is thought to be from 50,000 to 100,000 years old.

BARBER SHAVES FIVE GENERATIONS

Bert Beckler, barber of the "Billy B" barber shop in Union City, has worked on five generations of his own family.

The cause of her illness was not known until the child had emitted three links measuring three inches long. She suffered no ill effects.

CHILD SWALLOWS LINK

Two-year-old Joan Kuiper, Indianapolis, became suddenly ill recently. The cause of her illness was not known until the child had emitted three links measuring three inches long. She suffered no ill effects.
