

Who, at this time of the year, doesn't like the bright, light, to dig places for shrubs and plants, to treat to begin the magic life processes... to stand before even the faintest of plant growths, to marvel at it all—no one does in the presence of a beautiful baby!

SIXTY-FIRST YEAR—NO. 3

THIS and THAT

By G. R. A.

Last Saturday evening, down in radio station WWJ, the studio auditorium of the Detroit News was filled with young boys and women, who had come to participate in WWJ's first "Trotter's Night" party.

In presenting this interesting show, I created a rhythm that acted to show, among other values of trot fishing, how one's emotional side can be stimulated by developing one's ability to wield a fly rod.

It takes me away from the big city, I guess. I'll be at a big dinner tonight, won't you?

For out-of-doors gives me appetites the best. I love to row a rowboat; the oars give me exercise.

The blue makes me feel like a fish. And the water that fits from the old blades 'gaints' like—

To get us away from the city's mad grin. For as eagles, now, it looks nice on a dish.

And here's the second verse: "I Goin' Trot Fishin'." In a land where open spaces still remain to greet the eye.

I can see the sloping hills down which I'm fishing trout. I make my entrance in the river; I can see those piled-up logs.

Oh, I fondled that to memory smoozing streams with my hand. Bold enough to test his fly rod with a three-leader whipping.

Over stretches of fast water and my heart does thrill to feel. His quick pull upon my fly-rod—

There are some beauties calling; there's a harmony within. Every normal person's make-up, and in the perfect one and color with the finest things we dream.

Clears itself of every sorrow, every problem, and you find in the embrace of a river friend—
