LANSING—The most interesting educational 200 acres in Michigan are at Dearborn.

Michigan Mirror NON-PARTISAN STATE NEWS LETTER

Reflecting the ideas of Henry Ford, are two institutions at the Detroit suburb. One is known as the Edison Institute Museum, a collection of American products...

The story of the Ford automobile is told from the first completed in 1896 through subsequent developments to the historic Model A, represented by the 20,000,000th car, and the Model A, represented by the 20,000,000th car.

You will see the car that was the first automobile race in this country—Riker's "Bullet," a streamlined, skeleton affair of aluminum, steel, and wire, with storage batteries and overcome gasoline-powered cars, to capture the title.

As pioneer life in America is often associated with William Holmes McGuffey, whose readers follow the trail of graded instruction in the Middle West, it is only logical that Greenfield Village should start its daily living with a McGuffey. The McGuffey Home, a reproduction of the McGuffey home in Pennsylvania where Dr. McGuffey was born, is open to the public.

Classes in the first and second grade are held here during each regular school year. After teaching in the village school, a pupil moves to the Scott Settlement school or to the Town Hall school, where they receive their education through the village school system.

Church services are held each Sunday in the Chapel of Martha's Vineyard, named for mothers of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford, in the tower a sweet-toned bell, cast by Paul Revere, Jr., announces the morning services each morning for the village school children.

Other buildings in the Village are the Logan County Courthouse, a general store from Waterford, Michigan, DeLorge fire engine house, Lorange gristmill, sawmill, scrogan and color mill, blacksmith shop, carrier shoe shop, tinny studio, post office, depot, Stephen's store, and the home of a homestead. Care Col windmill, Edison's Menlo Park laboratory, and the stamper, "Sawance" on the Sawance river, a Greenfield Village will interest young and old.

It is the pride of America. "Probably the Reason" is that you can tell our forefathers lived with so few luxuries—Atchison Globe.

"They Have Discovered" a "donkey discovered a mine that has paid $45,000,000." And still, the high water comes, the much into mines that have paid nothing—Weston Leader.

What kind of a fellow is Smith? If you ever saw one follow trying to borrow money from another, the fellow shaking his head is Smith.

As he was largely to development of the automobile, here the motor vehicle exhibit attracts widespread interest among all visitors.

Early American makes include the Winton, Hayes, Cadillac and Packard, various cars of the Republican nomination for Prosecuting Attorney.

He is a graduate of the Detroit City Law School, now affiliated with Wayne University.

As a lawyer, he was an Assistant Prosecuting Attorney of Oakland County for two years. He is now engaged in private law practice in Pontiac.

State Convention of "Drys" Sept. 16

The state convention of the Commonwealth (Prohibition) party will be held at 10.30 a. m., Friday, Sept. 16, in the Kalamazoo Y. W. C. A. building, 211 S. Rose St. The time and place for the meeting were fixed at the official call just issued by E. M. Loope of Monroe, state chairman.

The principal business of the convention will be to nominate candidates for state offices to be voted on at the November election, but the state chairman announces that the meeting "will be open to suggestions from all citizens who are interested in a new political party which will be a party of the people, not based on the spoils system, but committed to honest, efficient, government and moral reform."

The county conventions, as indicated in this call, will be held at 7.00 p. m., September 14th, at such places as the respective county chairmen shall designate.

The Commonwealth party is recognized as the Michigan branch of the National Prohibition party and as such its national candidates whenever a national election is being held.

Shown arriving in Seattle, Wash., after hitch-hiking more than 2500 miles are Peter Paul Bell, 23-year-old Louisiana farmer, and son, Jack Raymond Bell, 2 years old. They left Waterford, La., after the boy's mother died last December. Bell had not asked for work more than 2000 times, had gotten only a few temporary jobs.

Beavers are Still Hard Workers—Government Guidance All They Need

The powerful lower jaw that the beaver uses for cutting trees, showing the enormous incisor teeth and the heavy, dented, digging muscles.

In California for instance there has been a great outcry against the beavers because they have spoiled irrigation projects. They dig ditches in the levees and block up the canals that are supposed to carry water around to crops.

Sometimes they dig their homes inside the levees; then when the high water comes, the levees go out and there is a lot of work and expense for the farmers. In one case a heavy ditching machine worked all day to dig drainage ditches—and the beavers came out at dusk and worked all night damming them up. The Fish and Game Commission had to be called to take down the dams.

But for the most part the beaver does good work. Besides improving the Idaho grazing lands, his dams will provide a permanent water supply and provide ponds deep enough for fishing and recreation.

Last year one small colony built 17 dams that now maintain a steady year-round flow on an Idaho stream that used to dry up every summer.

If the beavers weren't such self-effacing fellows, they would be proud to boast that they are an American industry. Beaver-trap-

"Transplanting a beaver, by use of the automobile, was a mountain stream where the rodent will join a colony of busy diggers going about their helpful work."

NEWS that a bunch of beavers will soon be doing their busy best for Uncle Sam building check dams on the small streams of Idaho to improve grazing ranges won't surprise many farmers in regions where the amphibious rodent has labored before.

The Department of Interior is paying about $8 each to have the beavers caught and moved to streams, but it counts on a return of about $300 worth of dam building from each animal.

If there's any element of surprise in the announcement for farmers who know the beaver, it probably comes from the fact that in some sections the farmers would pay most of $18 per get rid of the rodents.
