Birmingham Graduate of 25 Years Ago Shows How Success Can Be Attained

Dr. Russell

Pity the poor graduate. Every one tells him—"Pretty tough going these days—not enough jobs to go 'round." All about him, he hears disturbing theories about what is likely to happen within the next few years. What with one depression on the heels of another, it seems as if things were not going to be easy.

But these of 1938, are not the first graduates to look an uncertain future in the face. Young men and women have been doing it for generations. There have been wars and depressions—or "panics" as they used to be called—and young people of the past have made themselves equal to many a difficult future.

The story of the farmer boy, one of a large family, who plodded miles through rain or snow to the country school, and later made his place in the world, has become an American epic. Ever and then, one comes across a man, who is the living example of the favorite American success theme. Such a man is Dr. Nelson Vance Russell, son of Harry M. Russell of 183217 Beverly road.

One of Eight

Dr. Russell's career offers plenty of inspiration to June graduates of this year. Today he is one of the outstanding historians in the country, in charge of the Division of Reference in the National Archives at Washington, D. C. But the story of how he achieved this success is one of inspiration, determination and hard work through years of war and depression.

In June 1913, Nelson Russell was graduated from the Birmingham High School. He was one of eight children in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Russell, who lived on a farm on Evergreen road. The farm was five miles from Birmingham, but distance meant nothing to Nelson. Often he walked the five miles to be on time for his classes at the Birmingham High School, when unable to get a ride to town.

Rather than miss school, he was willing to endure the rigors of stormy weather on a five-mile stretch. His particular favorite in school was history, and this interest in the subject has been one of the factors that guided his choice of a career.

The year of 1913 was not a prosperous one—times were none too good. By making the usual parental sacrifice necessary in the father of a large family, Mr. Russell was able to send his son to college. The first year, Nelson went to Wooster College in Ohio, then deciding that he needed training of broader scope, he transferred to the University of Michigan, from which he received his A. B.

But one degree was not enough to reach the goal young Russell had set for himself. He borrowed money from his father, and by spending a few years teaching in Wyandotte, he was able to return to the University of Michigan to complete work on both his M. A. and Ph. D. degrees.

In addition to teaching, he played the organ in the First Presbyterian Church of Wyandotte, in order to earn more money for his education. It was during that time while a student at Ann Arbor. When he returned to the University to begin work on his Master's, it was necessary to give up his teaching position. However, he continued to be organist and choir director at the Wyandotte church, making the trip from Ann Arbor every Sunday.

The first thing Dr. Russell did upon the completion of his education, was to return the money he had borrowed from his father.

Begins Career

His first position after receiving his Ph. D., was to assist Prof Wan Tinne in the History Department at the University of Michigan, where he remained four years. Later he went to the University of California in Los Angeles as Professor of History, a post he held for six years. The next five years he spent in the same capacity at Coe College at Cedar Rapids, a. During this period, he was awarded a $2500 Traveling Fellowship by his Alma Mater, and devoted a year to traveling and studying abroad.

An interesting feature is that during this phase of his career, Dr. Russell met the man who was later to offer his present position in the National Archives, where Dr. Russell organized and established the Division of Reference. For the past two years, he has been the first chief of the Division. Under Dr. Russell's direction, American history and biography are being rewritten and compiled. It is also the function of the Division of Reference to furnish government officials with information on important matters of record. All government departments make use of the Archives.

Dr. Russell was born in Birmingham in 1895. In addition to his academic training, he served his country in the World War in the Division of Aviation. He was a member of the American Seminar in Russia in 1931. His hobbies are flowers and music.

He is another "home town boy" who has "made good," because he never hesitated to make personal sacrifices for the sake of education and later, for the work he chose. And if the graduate of today is bewilderedly casting about for some example to follow, he has to look back only 25 years to this Birmingham graduate of 1913.

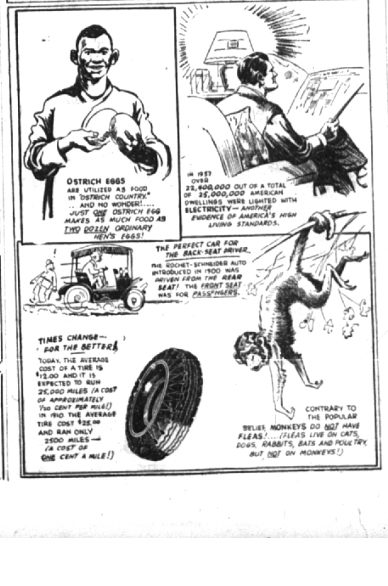
FAIR CALF

NEW YORK—A maid, a calf and a name. The maid has just christened the calf with the name Grover A. Whalen. If you need to know, Mr. Whalen is President of the New York World's Fair 1939. The calf took part in ceremonies marking the laying of the cornerstone of the Borden exhibit at the Exposition.

THE POCKETBOOK of KNOWLEDGE BY TOPPS



WE HEARD IT SAID BY—

Chief of Police John P. Hackett: "I can't understand why Birmingham residents object to the Dog Quarantine when it is enforced for protection in the community. Another thing that's hard to understand is why so many of these ardent dog lovers here, pay so little attention to their pets. I have found dogs drowned in Quarton Lake trying to get a drink because no pan of water had been provided for them by their owners. Other dogs are found foraging in garbage pails looking for food, which their owners neglected to supply. Others must make a bed where they can find it in garages, or on sidewalks because they have no dog-house or other comfortable place to lie. These facts are known, and yet owners protest because their cooperation is asked in keeping their dogs from contact with others during time when rabies might develop."

School Bogeys

One of the most well organized and effective groups in Michigan is the Michigan Education association, representing thousands of public school teachers.

They constitute a power at Lansing. The legislature is usually receptive to their demands.

Declining revenue from the state sales tax has caused a proportionate cut in distribution of state funds to primary school districts. Recently at Flint a proposal was voiced by educators that all proceeds from the sales tax be turned over to the schools. The bogey is an old one: curtailment or shutdown of school facilities unless more financial aid is secured.

The Land of Opportunity

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

A great thinker once said that every time he stood in the presence of a boy he wanted to take off his hat to the possibilities there represented.

Much the same idea must occur to countless Commencement Day orators as they address this month the eager army of American youth being graduated from high schools and colleges throughout our Nation.

For despite set-backs and discouragements, that thought applies to the young men and women of America today, as to the youth of no other nation on earth.

It was for them—as for their predecessors—that America was established as the land of opportunity; a land where no aspiration could be too high, no achievement too great for the individual to attain by virtue of his own enterprise, his own courage, his own ability.

That's why the men who made America wrote into its fundamental law a Bill of Rights which guarantees to every man freedom of conscience, of speech and of opportunity.

And that's where America differs from those new governments of Europe, where all rights are subordinated to the will of the man or the party in power, and where individual opportunity—with the press and religion—is in chains.

To the youth of America has been bequeathed a priceless heritage of opportunity, which unfavorable conditions can delay, but must never destroy. It was won for them, often at heroic sacrifice, by the generations that out of a wilderness hewed our great nation. It is theirs to use to the limit of their ability.

But it is theirs also to preserve for the generations that follow. The future of America is not in the hands of an abstract fate. As always, it is in the hands of men. It is the responsibility of youth, new and through the years ahead, to keep our nation as bright in opportunity, as gloriously free, as did their forbears in the past.

And as we consider the need to preserve that spirit of freedom, which America above all nations represents, well may an older generation bow in respect to the responsibilities and the opportunities—which await our young graduates today.

A Debtor With a Conscience

Oh, for more fellows like Fred Hohner, above, unemployed mechanic of Newark, N. J., who sent the federal government a $100 money order in payment for mission house shelter provided him in 1935. Saving only $12 for himself, Hohner said: "If I hadn't paid now I might have had no money to pay."
