and riding horses will be there in time for the campers. Mr. Lynd states that there is still room for a few more boys, and advises those interested to get in touch with him before the season opens.

A large group of local youths have already signified their intention of attending the camp. Among them are David Thomas, John Jickling, Allen Hopkins, Dick Harrell, Jim Bennett, Carl Vary, George Baldwin, Charles Lewis, and Hugh Mark.

By Alice Ann Sanders Miss Bowler, an experienced school teacher but a novice driver, was driving her new car home from school one night and noticing a policeman on the corner, she kept one eye on the policeman and the other on the lights.

The light was green and so Miss Bowler started to cross the intersection, just as that instant, however, it turned yellow and she stopped immediately with the front of her car projecting into the cross street.

The tall policeman took long strides toward her car and Miss Bowler cringed from anticipation of what he was going to say to her for barging into a yellow light. Instead she heard his voice pleasantly at the window. "Thank you, Mam! It's a real treat to find someone who obeys the law right to the letter."

Time's Footprints. Interview (with newspaper)—This article says that women used cosmetics in the Middle Ages. "If you have a cut on your face, you use them and you're no chicken."

Embarrassing Scrap Book. "Do you keep a scrap book?" "No," answered Senator Sorchum. "I started one, but it contained so much that was impolite I couldn't take it home without having it expurgated."

That's The Life For You. "Mother," said little John bursting into the house, "there's going to be trouble at the chemist's. His wife has got a baby girl and he's had a 'Boy Wanted' sign in his window for a week."

TWO IN ONE

By Marjorie Elaine Porter. When the ancients looked into the mysterious and fiery depths of precious stones, they saw strange interpretations as to their meanings. They attached various significance to different kinds of stones, and down through the ages, some of these meanings have come to the stones, so that many people still associate them "properly in love."

It is interesting today, if one possesses a lovely emerald to know that the original interpretation of this stone is one that "discovers false friends and insures true love." The always popular diamond is supposed to signify purity. It's added charm is that it maintains peace and disperses storms.

The garnet denotes "constancy" and "fidelity." The pearl, like the diamond, and so signifies purity and innocence. The ancient charm of the ruby was that it was supposed to discover "poison, and correct evils resulting from mistaken friendships."

One who possesses the sapphire, according to the ancients, will be free from enchantment. It also denotes repentance. The rarest of all stones, the opal, means fidelity and friendship, and is particularly potent in preventing bad dreams. Fortunate is she who owns a turquoise, because it denotes "prosperity in love."

The amethyst is a preventive against "violent passions." The agate insures health, long life and prosperity. The moonstone is a "good luck" stone, and the onyx will bring with it "conjugal felicity." Jasper denotes, in contrast, the opposite; it is a preventive of misfortune; the bloodstone means steadfast affection, courage and wisdom, and beryl will bring everlasting youth and happiness.

In choosing a gift, one night, for sentimental reasons, select a stone for its significance rather than for its monetary value, as the ancients believed that the charm was more potent, when the stone was worn or presented as a gift.

By Carol Dweley

There are a number of reasons why one's vacation, to be a happy one, should be passed in a jaded cell, secure from intrusion. When you come back to work after your two weeks or whatever; if you jaws ache from gritting your teeth (in a vain attempt to keep from screaming); if every muscle seems to be pulling the wrong way with all its strength; if your once comely face wears a haunted and furtive expression; if upon other changes have come over you—then you spent what is all-too-often the usual kind of vacation.

Take the little blonde number whose room is next to yours, and who curls you up in the porch the morning you appear for a breath of nature's elixir before dinner. She's friendly, and so anxious to take you into "The Gang" that you have to shove her into the nearby jumper bushes. However, "I'm so glad you're up here honey," she gushes. "The Gang—I mean this bunch of crazy kids that passed in a jaded cell, secure from intrusion around together all time—I mean we always like to have new people come into the bunch and a cutie like you. You've got to have a trouble." She becomes more confidential before you can get a word in edgewise. Indeed, you feel that no words of yours would be appropriate to the occasion.

She eyes a pop-eyed specimen of manhood, gloomily regarding a tennis ball against the side of the building. He, in turn, regards you so hopefully that you are sure he wants to be alone with the crazy kid that comes up to your mind him, "the giggler." "That's Ferdie Gromble-snotch, and he's nuts about me but I don't give him a tumble. I think it cramps a girl's style to be tied down to one fella especially if she gets more'n she can take care of with-and-furtive expressions from her eyelashes, other changes have come over you—then you spent what is all-too-often the usual kind of vacation."

It appears that your husband has been talking to Mr. Gromble-snotch, and the prospect of two weeks with Ferdie and his gang-friend and THE GANG is so appalling that you return to the city that night, spending the remaining vacation days curled up in the apartment with good books, and the nights at night clubs. You feel fine when you go back to work again, too.

If you had stayed, you'd already be at the furtive, tooth-gritting stage before the first two hours. The rest would come later. The first time you went swimming, there would doubtless be two gorillas, masquerading as men, whom you would know except as "Tiny" and "Fats." These two would, without fail, labor under the delusion that girls fall for pile-driver tactics. The wildest item in their repertoire would be to seize your ankles and wrists and hurl you ten feet off the dock, into water that was very cold, very rough and plenty deep. This pretty trick, after you had already announced that you would be your first swim in more than a year and that you weren't very good anyway, is enough to advance you to the aching muscle stage.

There's nothing much that can happen after you've met the blonde Ferdie and "Tiny and Fats." But they will, if given an opportunity, wreak such havoc on your character that even fresh air and sunshine are no good. Run through poison ivy, swim in mud and get mad bulls if you may, but don't meet The Gang unless you can make a quick getaway or are fully armed.

In a fervent kiss of post-wedding happiness, Angelo and Lucklessbach, 18-year-old heir to a million dollar estate and William Dobbs, 22-year-old butter and egg salesman, are shown above after they got married despite parental objections. After Andrew's father, Commodore E. F. Lucklessbach, shipping executive, had refused to give his consent and the family minister had refused to perform a church ceremony, the couple used the home of a friend for a bridal chapel and were married by another minister.

- Hollywood Modistes Amazing Women Private Radio Jokes By Virginia Yale

CAROLE LOMBARD and Clark Gable really ought to go into the dressmaking business. They co-operating on a sports jacket which Alice Marble, the United States' Number One woman tennis player, will wear when she steps out on the courts of Wimbledon, England, to battle for a championship.

Carole designed the jacket, (she's Alice Marble's best friend) and Clark had his tailor make it. It's a knockout. And Alice, tall, blonde and pretty, will wear it.

Remember "Dawn Patrol," in which Richard Barthelmess starred, and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., after pleading and fighting for the role, played the second lead so ably that ERROL FLYNN he stole the picture and proved himself a good actor! Well, it's to be made again, with Errol Flynn, Patric Knowles and Bill Rathbone in the leading roles.

Claudette Colbert, who recently got home from that European vacation, likes simple clothes—but listen to the description of the dress recently designed for her by Travis Banton, one of moviemod's ace designers. It's frolic, it's frolic, it's white organza, covered with a printed pattern of cherries in black. The skirt is shirred and full, the neckline is outlined by a bounce, with wide flourishes forming the sleeves. Sounds anything but simple!

She Brady has had years on the stage and years in the movies, but when you hear her on the radio you may be sure that she is nervous. The microphone simply scares her into such a state of nerves that the pages of her script have to be pasted on cardboard, to keep them from rattling.

Encouraged by its success in building Ginger Rogers up as a dramatic star, RKO is going to try to do the same thing with Ruby Keeler, the dancer who is Mrs. J.olson in private life. You'll see the first results of the new campaign in "Mother Carey's Chickens." Mrs. Fay Bainter and Ralph Morgan also in the cast, the girl will have to act or be utterly awfully.

Bob Ripley has discovered, in his search for "Believe It Or Not," that it is three and two-thirds times as easy for a man to become an amazing person as it is for a woman to do so. He finds that amazing women are just as interesting as men, but rarer. The only reason he can give is that they don't have as much chance to distinguish themselves as men do.

The first thing any of us know, someone is going to form an organization to protest against radio programs which are awfully amusing to the audience in the broadcasting studio, but pretty dull to those who just tune in, and can't see what is going on. Eddio Cantor is one of the worst offenders. His office filled with records, radio is supposed to be heard, not seen.

Eddie Cantor. And I know of more than one instance in which a listener, at home, swore never to buy the sponsor's product because it was so annoying to hear the laughter and not know what was funny.

ODDS AND ENDS—Paramount may follow Marjorie's example and launch an air show in the fall. Stan Laurel and his Russian bride plan a fourth off-Prague Bluebird. The stamps from foreign letters, and given them to his friends—which keeps his office filled with letters and stamps. Around Hollywood they're calling "The Adventures of Marco Polo." Mrs. E. F. Lucklessbach, shipping executive, has refused to give his consent and the family minister had refused to perform a church ceremony, the couple used the home of a friend for a bridal chapel and were married by another minister.

The "Terror Feminine" Mistress—Why did you leave your last place, Mary? "Maid"—Because I did not know what this one was like.
