Hawaii Holiday Hawaii sometimes lose their significance, or at least part of it, as the years roll by. As time goes on, they are dedicated in all the fervor of emotion, which grows a little more dim in each succeeding decade and generation. Memorial Day, which the entire country will observe Monday, may have been a sad occasion when it was first made as a day on which to mark the graves of those who gave their lives for a great cause. Then, as the years passed and the grief became less poignant, Memorial Day was observed with patriotic demonstrations. It was a day of grief and mourning, when the World War exploded like a bomb. The War changed the picture. Memorial Day became again a day of glad memories, set aside for the marking of graves. But, it is nearly 20 years since the World War closed with a jubilant burst of human frenzy, the frenzy of uncontrolled joy. History is registering her steps, and we are again at the stage, where someone has had martial funerals in the world around us, as we observe Memorial Day as a patriotic occasion. "What will the day mean to future generations? It would be enough, that those who are to come, should mark it as a day for honoring men, who in the remote past, did as soldiers. But, one wonders, sometimes, if Memorial Day is to be in each year like a day of mourning, no war has yet ended wars, and that war is a thing of the future as well as of the past? If so, there will ever be a cloud between us and peace, no matter how brightly it shines. But if the spirit of war might die, and liberated man stand firmly upon its grave, then Memorial Day should lose its old significance for a new one of peace and security in the joy of most living.

LIVE and LEARN Dr. Billips, a young man, who had come to town to take over the practice of the beloved old Doctor Burgess who had died a few weeks previous, had just nicely begun his practice when John Martin, little girl, sprang for ankle and was rushed by her mother to Doctor Billips for treatment. Now, the old doctor had never had a case like this. He knew the pulse and character from occurring in their circumstances. So when John Martin had to pay more than usual, he took out a card saying to the doctor an "I'm not the baby but I'm just as good as any young boy."

chearss and the day of the wedding came. To the strains of the wedding march the youngest sister marched slowly up the aisle in the arm of her father with Floyd carrying her train admirably. As he stepped his mother sitting sedately in the pew he started her by asking in an audible whisper, "How do I do?" "Mom!" Taking his eyes from the train caused him to let it trail and when he looked back it was so late, he had stepped on it and was riding to his fall. He fell with that over backwards and of chargin rolled into the pew where he remained during the ceremony. When the church closed, his mother went quietly to the post office and bought her small son from under the pew and he really was puzzled. "Daddy, you're having a party tonight, aren't you?" "That's right, sonny, now you'll probably never forget what the School School, mean, Auntie told you that you looked like a pig on Sunday." "Yeah, you bet! If you'd had your watch on walking to the Ladies' room!"

Holiday styles take a hint from Honolulu, the latest fall inspiration center. Witness the Hawaiian frock which Ann Milway, of Portland, Ore., wore at the party, where she wore the above. Made of hand-blocked cotton in brilliant colors, the dress suggests playful days on a sun-bathed beach. The overall atmosphere is increased by the high neckline and the narrow, light-fitting belt. Mrs. Lewis C. Wetling, of Indianapolis, has arrived to make an extended visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Gardner M. Cobb, of Bryn Mawr road. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Boynton and their son, Fredrick and Charles, of Dorchester road, are leaving Saturday for Indianapolis, where they will attend the automobile races at Memorial Day.
