BACKGROUND OF AUTUMN COLORS MARKS NUPTIALS

Miss Mavis Robertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Robertson of Webster avenue, became the bride of Henry C. Maes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Maes of Fairfield avenue, in a quiet ceremony celebrated at eight o'clock Saturday morning. The Rev. Father James W. Cotter read the rites at Holy Name Church.

The bride wore a suit of beige wool, the coat of which was trimmed with a lynx collar. Her brown pill-box hat, ornamented only with a face veil, matched her brown accessories. She wore a corsage of orchids.

Mrs. Dominic N. Cavalier was her sister's only attendant. She chose a brown suit for the occasion. Her short cape was banded with fur and she wore teal blue accessories. Her doll hat was in teal blue also and she wore a corsage of beige mums in bronze and yellow shades.

Mr. Maes was attended by Mr. Cavalier, as best man.

The bridal party formed before an altar decorated with large white chrysanthemums and tiny bronze button mums, in gold vases. Tall gold standards held the white tapers which illuminated the scene. Bronze and white mums were used in the decorations for the wedding breakfast and reception, at which Mr. and Mrs. Robertson were hosts in their home.

Mrs. Robertson received her guests in a brown suit, fashioned with a three-quarter length coat, and brown accessories. Her corsage of bronze and yellow mums matched that of the matron of honor.

Mrs. Cavalier who, with her husband, arrived by motor to her son's wedding, chose an all-nylon ensemble. Her flowers were white chrysanthemums.

The bridal pair are at present on a motor trip through Missouri and Illinois. When they return, they will make their home in Birmingham.
