The HAPSHOG GUILD
HALLOW'E'N
"What's inside" This snaphog could fit into a Halloween series telling the story of jack-o'-lantern.
The light interesting silhouettes can be made in this way. A plain black colored wall is best.
Make "about" pictures by double exposure. Place the camera on a table, and take a short exposure of a corner of the room, including some furniture. Then, without moving the camera or winding the film, have a subject placed in a white sheet into the corner, and open the camera for the second, shorter exposure. With correct exposure the "ghost" will be transparent and the furniture or wall-paper will show through him. To be safe, try several shots with different exposure times.
Ward pictures are not all of Halloween. There are children's costume parties, rich in possibilities for "memory" snapshots. Take them with old lighters and Kodak or Ansco film. They will be the better. And Halloween preparations provide a splendid picture-story out of the "ghost" pictures. A series of pictures showing the purchase of the pumpkin, the carving, and the final result grinning from a front window. Indeed, at Halloween, there is never a dull moment for the camera. Get yours ready now.

BUILDING PERMIT
RENEWED
The City commission Monday night refused to grant the request of A. W. Plier to renew a temporary building permit for the structure located at 260 Hampton street. The refusal was prompted by the commission's charge that wide-strip buildings in the business district must be removed. The building in question has been in use for some time, but about five years with a "temporary" renewal every 90 days.
