Literary Head-Liners Are Now at Baldwin Library

News is being made every day in the world of books. Exciting persons are publishing their adventures, and fiction keeps pace. No small share of these outstanding volumes find their way to the shelves of the Baldwin Public Library. The most recent consignments of books are being read and talked about all over the county. Birmingham residents will be well pleased to keep up with the times, through the library.

"My Husband, Gabrielowitch," by Clara Clemens, holds special appeal to those living in the Detroit area. The daughter of one genius, wife of another and celebrated in her own right, the author of "My Father, Mark Twain," tells a warmly human story of the romantic marriage of two young music students. Their years together include his brilliant career as a pianist; the founding of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and reminiscences of their musical and literary friends. The book is one for music lovers and for everyone who respects the memory of the late Ossip Gabrilowitch.

"Crippled Splendor," by Evan John, presents the exciting life, glorious romance and terrible death of James Stewart, first of that name, companion-in-arms to Henry V, prisoner, poet, soldier, lover and king. James was also the first Stewart to rule in Scotland, bringing his country up with him, leaving his companionship short-lived. He was royal in wealth and love and every inch a king, but the splendor of his life ended under a dagger.

"The Rolling World," by Richard Hallett, is a bracing find in the literary world. The author has been in strange places, by means of his book, accompanies the reader to the gruesome depths of a copper mine; down an Australian river on a hand-made raft; across the Atlantic nursing a war cargo of horses and mules; retching between each adventure to the picturesque port of Boothbay Harbor, Me. The sage comment and advice of Captain Ram mangle entertainingly with the roars of John L. Sullivan, and the reader feels that he too has been sailing before the mast, exploring London and a policeman in Boston.

"Blood and Steel," by Bernhard Menne, performs a salutary, necessary and overdue job. The House of Krupp, whose barons have been bombarding European and world history for more than half a century, has never been investigated. Now, at the hands of an avid and accurate fact-finder, they shy and haw of this great book; are opened to inspection.

"Building the British Empire" is by James Truslow Adams, best known for his vigorous and original contributions to American history. His work is epic for this book in every sense. Appropriately, he has said: "There is no greater and more inspiring story in the history of Western civilization than the building of the British Empire."

"Listen! The Wind," by Anne Morrow Lindbergh, has a foreword and maps by her husband, Charles A. Lindbergh. She has written the story of a survey flight around the most important and unmanageable of the oceans, the North Atlantic. From Africa to South America and more they flew, to aid the final development of the air routes. Often their landing places had no facilities for planes, and they grew to be independent as possible of outside assistance.

"English Rue," by Martin Hertz,

STEINBAUGH RESIGNS FROM OFFICE IN STATE

Lansing, Oct. 26—The state highway department this week without the regular services of one of its chief executives as its health forced the resignation of Deputy Commissioner-Chief Engineer Vannum B. Steinbaugh, Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner, in accepting the resignation, offered Steinbaugh a part-time post as consultant at a retainer salary of $2,000 a year plus $50 a day for active services. The deputy's former salary was $7,800 a year. In his new capacity as consultant, Steinbaugh will be relieved of routine duties and confine his work to engineering plans, investigations, etc.

The commissioner named Deputy Commissioner Harry C. Coons as chief engineer while his former assistant, John C. Schaub, was appointed engineer in charge of field operations.

Steinbaugh is also the non-salaried chairman of the State Bridge Commission of Michigan, which recently completed the construction of the Blue Water International Bridge between Port Huron and Sarnia. A graduate of the University of Michigan with a civil engineering degree, Steinbaugh came with the State Highway Department in 1933 as road engineer. He was made deputy a year later and chief engineer in July, 1937. Prior to his connection with the Department, he was in the contracting field.

The commissioner accepted his deputy's resignation "with great regret" and said that it is "with your distinguished service to the state," Mr. Steinbaugh was formerly a resident of Birmingham.

Gander After Fifth Championship

Between them they weigh 55 pounds—35 pounds for the four-times national champion gander, and 23 pounds for little Bobbie Losescher. This white Embden gander will be after its fifth championship award at the Great Western Livestock show Nov. 20-26 in Los Angeles.

John Morse To Talk On Modern Artist

How the contemporary artist, as well as the general public, sometimes runs into difficulty with the "modern" style will be discussed in an illustrated lecture on "The Dilemma of the Modern Artist" to be presented at the Detroit Institute of Arts Tuesday evening, November 1, by John D. Morse, museum instructor. The lecture will be the sixth in a series of Tuesday evening lectures offered by the Institute as part of its enlarged program of free educational activities through the fog of political terms and "isms," the nation's greatest woman political writer has conceived this guide book for those who seek information.

"The Flying Chinaman," by Harry H. Fern, is something new. A Chinese mystery story. There are appropriately ridiculous drawings, for illustrations and all the ingredients found in typical mystery books.

"She Was Carrie Eaton," by Elizabeth Corbett, tells the early life of "Young Mrs. Meigs," who received so many proposals she could not choose between her suitors. Finally, as she was nearing 30, she decided her fate by falling in love with Mr. Meigs. To discover an unimagined obstacle to their marriage.

Briefly noted are "Stars to the Westward," by Bruce and Sheridan Fane, who sailed their boat from New York to Shanghai just in time for war; "Fare's Fare," by Jeanne Abbott, a party book useful for everyone and full of suggestions for every sort of party, including Halloween; "Color Photography," an inspired log for the amateur by Keith Henney and "Re-Fashioning the Home," by Carl G. B. Knauff.

What Your City Commission Is Doing

October 24, 1938

Bills were approved in an amount of $14,000.32 including a payroll of $8,211.30, covering the two week period from October 1st to October 15th.

The manager was authorized to install a new water service on a deferred payment basis.

An application for renewal of a temporary building permit covering use of Lot 33, AP No. 21 was denied.

The Elmo Company, Chicago, Illinois and the D. A. Matot Company of Chicago were approved as sub-contractors on the Sewage Treatment Plant.

The clerk was authorized to rent four additional voting machines for the election to be held November 8th.

A bill in the amount of $40.00 charged to the Radio Cab Company covering damages to two trees near the intersection of Woodward and Oak as the result of an accident in which the cab was involved, was cancelled after an investigation indicated that the driver of the cab was paid to a sudden emergency to avoid hitting another car travelling at a high rate of speed.

Advertisement for bids for the construction of the Clawson Road Intercepting Sewer was authorized, and the bids will be opened at 2 p. m. November 18th.

By common consent of the Commission, the meeting regularly scheduled for Monday, October 23rd, was postponed to Tuesday, November 1st at 7 p. m.

The Birmingham Archery Club requested, and received permission to construct a fire place on city property at the 14 mile road and Cranbrook. The fireplace will be for the use of the public and will become the property of the City. In connection with preparation of this site for public use, the Archery Club was also given permission to remove four dead trees, all of such work to be paid for by the Club.

Irene E. Hanley, City Clerk.

NEW AREAS OPEN TO DEER HUNTERS BY STATE ORDER

LANSING, Oct. 26—Additional hunting ground will be available to deer stalkers this fall through the opening of certain areas previously forbidden land within the boundaries of game refuges and the opening of most of Beaver Island.

At the same time, bear hunters will be barred from previously open territory on Keweenaw peninsula, north of Portage canal. Two game refuges—Molasses River and Lake Superior—have been reduced in size, the boundaries of both being shrunk and land on the outside which was inside the old boundaries being thrown open to hunting. All of the Gladwin game refuge has been opened to deer hunting, while the loose refuge has been abolished.

All of Beaver Island except St. James township also will be open to deer hunters for the first time in several years. St. James township, which includes all of the islands in the Beaver Island group lying around the north end, was kept closed in response to the petitions of local residents who declared the presence of the deer as a tourist attraction was more valuable than their presence as game.

The reason for giving protection was given by the conservation commission following investigation by the Michigan Game Commission disclosed that the number of deer on the island had increased sufficiently to warrant hunting.

As in the case of the Pen for St. James township on Beaver Island, local sentiment explains the reason for giving protection to bear in the northern part of the Keweenaw peninsula. The bear are regarded as important attractions for tourists.

Y. M. C. A. WILL HOLD ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Sponsored by the Y. M. C. A., the tenth annual Cranbrook Conference of high school boys and girls will convene at the Cranbrook Hotel on Saturday, Nov. 5. Rev. Dr. Thomas Harris and Rev. R. W. Woodroffe, of Christ Church, Detroit, and George Carhart, and Frank B. Ruf will be leaders of the conference.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR DEDICATION OF MASON HALL

East Lansing, Mich., Oct. 26—From Peabody, Louis Randall, Norman Clark and Robert Kregor, Michigan State College students from Birmingham, are residents of Stevens T. Mason hall, new men's dormitory, which will be dedicated Sunday afternoon, Oct. 30.

Parents and friends of the 436 residents of the dormitory as well as descendants of Stevens T. Mason, Michigan's "boy" governor, and members of the State Board of Agriculture will be invited guests.

Mason hall is part of the College's self-financed building program, and is first of four projected dormitories which form a quadrangle, housing 2,000, the second, Abbot hall, already is under construction, and will be ready for use next September.

A short dedicatory service will be held in Mason hall at 2:30 p. m. Sunday, Oct. 30, followed by a general reception for Mason hall residents' parents, faculty, townspeople, and others from 3 to 5 p. m.

Completion of Abbot hall next summer, along with a hospital, Stevens house, and another women's dormitory, veterinary science clinic and livestock pavilion, will complete a $5,800,000 building program, which also includes Mary Mayo and Sarah Langdon Williams women's dormitories, and a W. P. A. beautification project. Total cost to the state for the entire program will be $142,150.
