

Five things you take from the thrill out gets from contact with their children. Here is something so fine, so non-worldly, about little toddlers that the adult world always withers in skin and demands of babies, don't you think? It seems kind wrong that they have grown up!

SIXTY-FIRST YEAR—NO. 22

THIS and THAT

By G. R. A.

If the automobile manufacturers would take a poll among today's youth regarding the width of seats, they would have a lot of money on materials for the new models.

Women often are quite economical in their own placing the candles on their own birthday cakes.

Modern politicians have changed the Bible axiom: "By the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat," to the point that "By three votes for me shall thou be kept on relief."

Well, after all, fortunes in money have been built up by the same methods; so why shouldn't political fortunes be built up by the same methods? For what is the difference between topknots that enclose clean or preservative teeth and a politician who promises never improve the human lot?

Most of us are like the northern emerald spending the winter in Florida. He wrote back home: "Having a good time—wish I could afford it."

The best one-act circus the world ever produced was not started by Barnum or Bailey or the Ringling Bros.; it was started in the Garden of Eden when Adam gave to Eve an apple which Hello, Toots, let's band together for life."

With the fall coming on, many households will start carrying things for the next year. I suggest that you start by carrying the things you also plan a little "cannibal" of some of the lemons and apples that you have finished on the political vines since the last election.

"What is the modern age of innocence?" asks editor George A. Shaw, in his Pagan Progress. And he says: "Up to the age of two years, sir."

I know that no local man ever goes into the backyard when his wife sings, so that the neighbors will not think said wife is being beaten by her husband.

By the way, those street dances that have been held in Birmingham lately, are they really a summer recreation program or working out splendidly. The folks who mean responsible for them are deserving of applause. Let's encourage them to repeat for us. Cards are about it, boys and girls? Why not write The Eccentric a few letters on this subject? Surely you have enjoyed the affair, haven't you?

In eleven days Birmingham's public schools will be in session. And with it goes the time of flies—but just around the corner come the sweat and the snow shower. Br—

Conversation
Conversation is probably the foremost gift of civilized life. Good talk, flowing freely, sprinkled with wit and humor, and epigram, is rare food for the mind and spirit.

It is, if not a poor substitute for the nerves and refreshes the whole man. Unfortunately that the art does not flourish. Bridge, although a good game, is a poor substitute for conversation. In a conversation of weakness, or our inability to get through an evening if dependent solely on our wit for entertainment.

Clive Bell in his book, "Civilization," says: "Of the good things of life the best is conversation—real conversation—the exchange of sentiments and ideas, and people completely disarmed and at their ease, people without fear or suspicion, having no axes to grind, no hidden motives, no display themselves, seeking truth by way of pleasure."
