Mr. and Mrs. Angus D. McLay, of Winbleton drive will return to their home at the end of this week, after a ten-day sojourn at Sea Island, Ga.

Miss Virginia Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Thompson of Abbey road, will spend Sunday for Olivet College, where she will study for her second year.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Botsford are entertaining as their house guest in their home on Pine road, Mrs. Botsford's mother, Mrs. Walter Wesley of Detroit. The visitor will remain here for several weeks.

A number of parties will compliment Mr. and Mrs. Dalton Anderson of Suffolk road, before the family moves to Marion, O., at the end of the month. Mrs. David Walker Lee entertained for Mrs. Anderson's pleasure at luncheon and bridge on Friday in her home on Ferndale avenue. Besides the honoree, her guests included Mrs. James Morrison Taylor, Mrs. Paul Hoffman, Mrs. Robert W. Woodroffe, Mrs. Carl A. Underhill, Mrs. John W. Blanchard and Mrs. E. A. Schirmer. On Tuesday, Mrs. Schirmer entertained at another luncheon and bridge, in her home on Country Club drive.

Mrs. W. S. Gilbreath Jr., of Puritan road left Monday for Milwaukee, for a week's sojourn. While there, she will be the house guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Allen Dickens.

Departing at the end of the month, to enter the architectural school of Cornell University at Ithaca, N. Y., will be Miss Cynthia Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Gilbreath Jr.

TWO IN ONE

By Marjorie Elaine Porter. There is something pathetic about a poodle dog. It seems to peer doubtfully across the world from behind the fringe of silky fur that curtains its wistful, black eyes.

The small poodle that covered so timidly beside a parked automobile on a busy Birmingham thoroughfare was even more pitiful than the average of its breed. Beside him towered a woman, who appeared tall and somewhat masculine even to the adult observer, but who, to the frightened little dog must have seemed a giantess.

She was commanding him in tones that sounded harsh above the street noise, which came away from the car. But the more she shouted, the more the little dog trembled. When she reached out with the tip of her umbrella, he shrank even more, and finally, tail between legs, he crawled under the car for protection.

But he was still within range of the menacing umbrella, which, with the aid of the giantess's long arm, was able to rout him from his hiding place. Then reaching down, the obvious temper, the giantess grasped the little dog by one front paw and dragged him across the pavement. In terror that darted unobscured, the poodle wrenched himself free, and was scurrying away from his tormentor, when the unbelievable happened. There on the busy thoroughfare, with all view of passers-by, the tall, angry woman kicked the covering little dog!

He cringed, and then in the most abject submission, lay at her feet. There was something sickening in the spectacle! One wanted to turn his head and close his eyes to shut out a sight so demoralizing. There lay the little dog, its spirit broken, its body quivering and so submissive to whatever blows might follow. The giantess was mistress!

There was the triumph of domination in her bearing, when she finally proceeded on her way, the small dog at her heels, now and then looking up at her, with the appeal in his eyes. And observing, one couldn't help wondering if the poodle's submission were not the answer to the question of why so tall a woman chose so small a dog for her "pet."

"Wow," said Sister, "if I sit on one more suitcase to get it closed, probably the sides will all fall off. I guess I'm packed now Mom and am I thrilled!"

Mother smiled fondly at the disheveled figure. "A college girl, and not being able to get up and get dressed, I guess I'm having to force you to go to bed so you'd be rested for your first day at kindergarten. And come on, Mom and I are going to take you and your baby to college." (Mother was all set to get tragic and Sister knit it.)

"Well Mom, don't sound so mournful about it. Heavens, it isn't though I'm going to the ends of the earth. I'll be home week-ends and stuff. Anyway, college is supposed to be fun. You act as though I were off to State Prison for a long stretch."

Deprived of sentiment, Mother turned brisly to the packing again. "Gracious but this room looks awful. And oh Sister—what an EARTH did you stuff into that laundry bag? You can't arrive at the dormitory with your baby on your back, like a peddler. What will people say?"

Sister hugged the offending sack to her. "I don't care what they say, so long as I don't lose any of the stuff in here. I was talking to Cousin Marcie—the other graduated last year, and so I hope her information is up to date and all these things are things she said I MUST have. Of course we'd forgotten them and some I never even thought of. Would you like to see some of 'em?"

"What's that thing?" asked Mother, suspiciously. "It looks like the wire basket I use in the kitchen."
