A. F. Owens, 551 Bates street, installed the atomic clock of the metric to a case in the Ohio building which parallels the presence of Lieutenant-Governor D. Dickson's succession to the office of governor at the death of Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald in Michigan. In the Ohio case, Andrew L. Harris, by virtue of the office of lieutenant-governor of the state, became governor June 18, 1906, at the death of the Governor, John M. Pattison, article III, section 17, of the constitution of the State of Ohio, provides that if the lieutenant-governor, while executing the duties of governor, shall become incapable of performing the duties of the office through death or for any other reason, the president of the senate shall act as governor, until the vacancy is filled or the disability removed. Mr. Harris said that his recollection was that at the time Lieut. Gov. Harris became governor, the majority leader of the House of Representatives, became Lieutenant-Governor.

The first butterfly of the season enough to renew hopes for spring, even when robins have become fairly common. Honors for butterfly-spying go to Mr. and Dr. Frederick A. Prothero and his family of Hanna street, for in 1939 season. No, it wasn't a hawk of nature. The winged beauty was a member of the common colony maintained in the Prothero family as an interesting and educational hobby. The insect, unusually large in size, put in an appearance on Saturday, March 18, thereby breaking all records established to date.

STORM NULLIFIES HARD WORK
ST. LOUIS (MPA)—Hours and days of toiling labor were nullified in a brief and freakish blink of a snowstorm. A mail-train, bound for Greenville and containing 2,000 Mountain county tax sale descriptions, was thrown on a moving train, slid down a bank onto the train tracks, and 2,000 descriptions were pulverized under the train wheels. The job has to be done all over again.

THE WORLD NEEDS LEADERS
"In my opinion the most important asset that an officer can possess is leadership. We may not be able to define leadership exactly, but we have no difficulty in recognizing it," states General John J. Pershing, distinguished soldier, commander of the A. E. F. during the World War, and one of the outstanding military men in the history of the United States.

"There is something about the leader that inspires confidence and makes men willing to follow him. It may be his superior ability, his excellent judgment, his character, or it may be his dash or possibly his sympathy and interest in the well-being of his men, but there is always some characteristic that gives him influence over his men."

"Leaders are needed in every calling and every profession. Courageous leadership is the one thing that can guarantee the success of a democracy. Its very existence depends upon the leadership of the men selected to conduct its affairs. Such men should actually lead their people in thought and guide them in forming their judgments instead of catering to their every whim in order to remain in office."

"Only under the leadership of men who held patriotism above personal interest can the ideals of the fathers be maintained. The selection of safe leaders in government is incumbent upon those who enjoy the rights of citizenship if they would insure the permanence of these sacred rights."

"These obligations call upon officers and men of our military and naval forces exactly as upon other citizens, and they should fulfill them by exercising the right of franchise whenever possible." General Pershing proved his ability as a great leader in times of peril. The lives of millions of men and the fate of nations depended upon his decisions and ability to lead others. He met every emergency in a manner that has caused him to be loved and respected by a grateful people.

VALUABLE OYSTERS

LINCOLN PARK (MPA)—When G. M. Geoffrey hit down on one of the morsels in an oyster stew he was eating in a local restaurant, he hit something hard. While he regratimed the proprietor for almost causing him to break a tooth, his wife discovered that the hard morsel was a pearl. There were two of them in the oyster. The proprietor offered $50 each for the jewels, but Geoffrey refused, preferring to have their value checked.
