

I'll Leave It to You

BY JOHN DENLER

Let's forget about the war for a few minutes and think about something more pleasant. For instance, there's the approaching football season. Being a rabid football fan myself—and a U. of M. alum—let me suggest a few ideas to boot. I can hardly wait, at this time of the year, to drive out to Old Ann Arbor and join the gay, enthusiastic throng of students that converge from every direction on the Michigan Stadium to witness the color and exhilaration of the annual Saturday afternoon football game.

In my opinion, college football is the thing of sports. For speed, excitement, spirit, and downright roughness, you can't find anything else—there's nothing to beat it. And what a background, with the organized cheering, the bands playing, the pom-poms, the stunts, the bright shades of red, blue, yellow, and crisp, invigorating air.

I believe I've only missed two or three Michigan games since I was graduated from the University six years ago, and I hope I shall be able to maintain as good an average in the years ahead. I hope I shall never grow too old, or too "sophisticated," to pass up a chance to see a college football game.

If you think you've seen football because you've watched a few professional games, you've missed a lot of other things. Some of the most boring afternoons I've ever experienced have been spent in trying to keep awake at one of these affairs.

Being composed of former college stars, these professional teams are usually so well-matched that nothing happens. So long as you see a ball carrier break away for any long runs in a game. Then, too, because most of the boys get paid so much a game, it is important to them that they do not get ruffed up to the extent that it becomes necessary to bench them. This explains the half-hearted blocking, the general lack of spunk, and the general lack of spirited action at the typical professional game. Moreover, these games have nothing even resembling the atmosphere of a college game.

Understand, I'm not questioning the actual playing ability of most professional footballers—as individuals, I mean—even though a good many of them have seen their best days by the time they've been out of school a season. When it comes to putting on a show for the spectators, however, the leading college teams have it over them like a blanket.

If you can get back to your alma mater this Fall and take in a football game or two, by all means do it. It will pep up your blood and color your cheeks. And if your alma mater is too far away, then hop in your car and drive out to Ann Arbor. I'll guarantee you'll get a kick out of it.

Pastor Commends City Commission

Civic Loyalty Day Sept 16, made a deep impression on the Rev. W. Glen Harris pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, it was revealed in a letter of appreciation sent by Mr. Harris to Mayor John E. Martz and the City Commission.

The letter follows: "Dear Mr. Mayor:— 'Will you kindly convey to the City Commission my congratulations and sincere good wishes for the fine program of last Saturday. I was profoundly impressed and greatly pleased with the exhibition of civic loyalty that the activities of the day portrayed. This type of program is imperative if we are to maintain the interest of people in government and thus preserve and promote the sacred trust of government and democracy among us. I have resolved in my own heart to be a better citizen and to be more concerned in the affairs of my government. I hope to have the privilege of attending some of the City Commission meetings in the future. With every good wish to each and all of you, I am, Sir, very truly yours, 'W. GLENN HARRIS'

Free Rent? The serious reviewer who said that "economic rent is sheer velvet presented by nature" is just as far from fact as it is possible to get. Land and sea, air and sunshine were "presented by nature," but these natural gifts are not economic rent, and in themselves they never created any economic rent. Automobiles are created by man, and the facilities of industry which have no value unless there are men to fabricate them; and the finished product has no selling value without a market. Rent results from the presence of population and the facilities of industry and society, because of people and their industry. Without the application of labor to the gifts of nature there would be no rent, and rent is a Public Income, which, if collected by government for public use, would make it possible to abolish all taxes.

S'mythology

By A. LAURENCE SMITH

Working Woman The working woman is in a tough spot, no matter what happens; in peace times she is scolded as usual for abusing for taking a man's job, and in war time (so it is reported from England) the shift in labor demand is such that she just loses her job. But this shouldn't disturb her needlessly; the point of view of the Technocrat is that our only way out is to get the bloated holders and the bums; the idle rich and the poor—production produces poverty.

Red Cross Workroom For Birmingham Is Planned By Officials

Announcement of the formation of a workroom in Birmingham for the production of hospital and refugee garments was made at the meeting of American Red Cross township directors' committee chairman and Roll Call workers which was held recently.

Other workrooms in the county are to be established at Pontiac, Royal Oak and Christ Church Cranbrook where work will be done under the direction of the production committee.

Dr. Harold A. Farington of Pontiac, Oakland County Red Cross chairman, announced at this quarterly meeting that according to word just recently received from Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American National Red Cross, plans made originally on Sept. 1 for a national enrollment of 1,000,000 members in the Red Cross township directors' committee in Europe. Quotas already assigned, of which the Oakland County chapter's share was of copper for shipment to Germany. Shipment was immediately stopped, but as the result of a telephone conversation with London, an Englishman authorized the release of half the copper to Germany? What is the answer to that one?

Newspapers and News A newspaper missed a very important piece of news in its report of the speech of a young woman just returned from Europe. She was in Belgium when the war started, and at that time a Belgian broker held a large quantity
