Egbert Beats War Inflation By Quick Purchase of Copper

The war front may be a long way from Birmingham but it did not take City Manager Donald C. Egbert long to figure out how the European conflict would affect the price of copper.

"The price has already gone way up," Egbert said. "By buying in quantity we got the copper at a price more favorable than at any time in the past."

The Commission also approved a contract for the next two years covering new water meters. The purchase price will be $7.60 each, 20 cents more than the previous contract.
