Who isn't nervous? A financial page reports that the bond market is nervous. Aren't we all?

Force is Always Questionable A speaker before a Veterans' organization advocated forcible deportation for all aliens, but I can't help wondering if really good citizens can be made through formal methods.

Camouflage Mussolini is loose again, and repeating his claims to need of more territory to obtain raw materials. What he wants and why he wants it are his secrets, but the "access to raw materials" is camouflage.

Useful Teeth We are told of people who "dig their graves with their teeth." But with this from Australia comes the story of a man who used his false teeth to save his life.

British Workmen and War The people of Britain don't want war, but on the other hand, the great mass of British people were mad at Chamberlain for promising with Hitler a year ago.

Will They Pay? Criminal as it may appear for us to build up an enormous burden of debt to leave on the shoulders of the growing generation, there is no real reason to worry about it.

The Wrong Answer It is difficult to imagine a great-waste of time than to use it in answering Father Goughlin. To be with him is unanswerable—as long as we have this depression of such vast unemployment.

Making Ends Meet Mrs. A.—How can Mrs. Bomley afford to keep three servants? Mrs. B.—Oh, she plays bridge with them every Saturday evening and wins back all their wages.

Wheat, Corn, Oats, Rice Considered Most Important Cereals of Today. Wheat, corn, oats and rice are the most important cereals of today. They rank high in nutritive value, combine delightfully with many other foods and are among the cheapest energy providing dishes.
