Tuition Scholarships Will Be Awarded By Academy of Art

Cranbrook Academy of Art, Bloomfield Hills, announces that it will award a limited number of tuition scholarships to young men and women living in the Detroit metropolitan area. The object in awarding these scholarships is to extend the facilities of the Academy to exceptionally talented students who cannot otherwise afford to make use of them.

These scholarships are open to both men and women between the ages of 18 and 25 years. Each scholarship has a value of $200 and consists of free tuition in the courses given in the Intermediate School of the Academy for the school year 1940-1941.

Candidates for these scholarships will be required to fill out the application form provided by the Academy, and to submit examples of their work, such as sketches, designs, or models which can form the basis for the Academy's selective judgment. Letters of reference as to character, integrity, and ability are also required. A short biography written by the applicant describing his background should be included. Each student to whom a scholarship is awarded will be required to pay the laboratory fee of $10 per term in advance.

Applications for these scholarships will be received not later than June 1, 1940. Address all correspondence to Richard P. Raseman, Executive Secretary, Cranbrook Academy of Art, Bloomfield Hills, Michigan.
