Turning to Birmingham by popular demand and will address the Quarten Parent-Teacher association at a meeting of that group to be held in the school auditorium Monday evening.

Prof. Muyskens, whose topic will be "Speech Emergent," is well liked here because he has the faculty of making his lecture highly interesting and understandable to his audience.

The public is invited to attend this lecture that is based on a topic of universal interest.

Scholarships Available For Kingswood School

Kingswood School Cranbrook announces that applications for a limited number of scholarships from Michigan girls for next year will be received at the school through March 30. In addition to the hearing scholarships, the school will extend a special scholarship in this area to a day student who possesses an unusually outstanding record.

Girls who are now in the seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh grades are eligible.

This is a striking sentence in view of Hermann's enlightening new book "The Voice of Destruction," showing the arch enemy of democracy, Adolf Hitler, as focusing his operations on that very spot of weakness. He is quoted by Kausinger as saying, "Today we are faced with the iron necessity of creating a new social order."

The class society of the Marxists is madness, but the democratic notion of a class order based on the money-bag is equally mad.

Miss Hornel spent some time in discussion and analysis of this amazing book, indicating the vital importance of its revelation and the appalling degree in which these purposes have reached their fulfillment. He is guilty of only two salient miscalculations in recent years as recorded here, and that being his certainty that England and France would not unite against him, and secondly, that the United States would manifest eagerness to adopt the Nazi program. This volume shows that all the necessity for honest and intelligent appraisal of the social and economic problems that our democracy is not meeting, and for persistent endeavor to make the needed adjustments within our governmental framework.
