Organ Recital Set At Arts Institute
Edgar Danby will present an organ recital Thursday evening, March 14, at the Detroit Institute of Arts at 8:30.

Her book, News is My Job, is her own story of those years in her own China. Modest and unassuming, it is not only an absorbing story but presents a vivid picture of an era that ended with the Japanese invasion of China.

Congressional approval of a ban on import of low-priced agricultural products was asked by George N. Peck, former AAA administrator, who told House trade treaty hearing that pacts negotiated under Roosevelt's reciprocal treaty program are unconstitutional.

Enrollment fees for the Institute under the group plan are $2.00 for a club or organization. This fee, according to Dr. Charles A. Fisher, director of the Extension Service, entitles club members to attend any or all of the lectures without further charge.

Two Additions
Speaking of Scouts reminds us that there are two recent additions to the District Commissioner's staff. They are Russell Grinnell, former Scoutmaster of Troop B-8, and Ralph La Grange, a newcomer to Scouting in Birmingham. Franklin Hershey has taken over B-8 since Mr. Grinnell left.

B-B Doing Nicely
The infant troop B-B is pretty well filled out, and is doing nicely, thank you. It will be registered along with the other local troops soon now. Incidentally, Paul Savage, the Scoutmaster, is shaping up pretty well in that capacity. We ought to know, since we are a committee of Scoutmasters, having been in various troops under five of them.

Portrait of Jurjoan Cobb, by H. S. Kewler. For many years a murderer, were stranded on a small deserted island in the Big River. Another of the stories of the Sheriff, who hoped to identify the criminal before the rising water hid him on his gun boat. There was not enough room on the bit of land for more than three. The course of the interrogated three men told their stories, so that the plot is a web of interesting and tangled threads.

Riders of the Range, by Charles Snow. When Marty Bridger took charge of his father's range, he came into immediate conflict with a gang of rustlers. After that, things began to happen. A new life of the West, with plenty of fast action, smoking guns, and hard riding.

Polonaise, by Martin Hare. Madeleine Doremont and her husband were going to a very modern and civilized about their divorce. While it was pending they spent a certain period with relatives in Poland. The events which followed make a clever picture with an undercurrent of seriousness.

Live and Kicking Ned, by John Mansfield. Farther adventures of the author's nine-lived hero, who was once hanged for murder and then brought to life again. In this book he finds himself penetrating darkest Africa where he aided an ancient isolated clan in which people in their fights against encroaching blacks. A thriller of the first water.

Blind Loyalty, by Margaret Pedler. The romance of a woman who loved twice. The two alternates from England to Africa.

Golden Portage, by Robert Orman and Cassin, recorded a murder. Steve Bentley, prospecting for gold in the Frozen North, was killed in a duel. Cheboko, a shoo to save the girl he loved, her stored fortune of raw gold and his own neck.

Happy Harvest, by Geoffrey Farnol. A first class cloak-and-sword romance laid in early nineteenth century England. Characters include a courageous (if not always quite bright) hero, a brilliant heroine, and deep-dyed villain. There are forest duels and moonlight escapes. Added humor comes from the activities of Jasper Shrig, Bow Street officer, who solves a vexing mystery. Altogether a most satisfactory story.

Undersea Film and Sweden Talk Next On Adventure Series
"Exploring the Bottom of the Sea" will be the next two motion picture public lecture programs offered by the World Adventure Series at the Detroit Institute of Arts. Reno Dussau, Hollywood's hardwired undersea photographer, will tell of his adventures on the ocean floor in the West Indies at 3:30 next Sunday afternoon. Max Clayton, author of the world's greatest travel lecturer, takes his audience on a pictorial motor tour of Sweden at 8:30 next Tuesday evening, March 12.

Dussau shows exciting motion pictures of 66-foot "skin dives" to plant his camera and to rescue men trapped in the weird submarine jungles. Burton Holmes hands his audience at Gothenburg, proceeds by boat through the lovely Gota Canal to Stockholm, then sits at the principal cities and towns as well as the country.
