

From the Women's Angle

By NELLIE HURLEY MINIFIE
Only women—specially—will turn their houses completely on end when it comes house cleaning time. There are, however, some of men who are very conscientious about the work.

After nearly three weeks of climbing over step ladders, after seeing furniture piled ceiling high in a corner, after tripping over stray pieces of extension cord and not being able to find a chair to sit on or a bed to sleep in, I am formally lodging a complaint against all men who think floors won't be properly varnished, storn woodwork correctly placed, nor wood work perfectly painted unless they do it themselves.

The first week I bore it bravely, knowing all the time that the new wall paper would probably rejuvenate the living room, that having the floors sanded would certainly make a new house out of it.

Miss Minifie
I have been wearing the same dress for a week because my clothes have been moved to heaven knows where. I can't find my shoes, nor my tooth brush, the typewriter nor the ivy I wanted to transplant.

By KATHERINE W. GEORGE
Thanksgiving always renews memories for me of enormous family dinner parties conducted with pomp and deliberation at the home of my two bachelor great uncles in Detroit.

My uncles were as straight as an arrow. A preliminary attempt Sunday to remember into which rooms the furniture, the rugs and the various assortment of lamps, books and odd bric-a-brac went left the omnipotent male of our house at a slight disadvantage.

By Mrs. George
We always started off in high spirits, coming in out of the crisp November cold into the hospitable big house, redolent of savory Thanksgiving odors; but it was never long before everyone would begin to bemoan under the impact of seemingly endless courses.

When we were older, old enough to have beaux, we were glad to be rescued from the gloom and semi-consciousness of such a Thanksgiving afternoon to go off to a football game and later to dance off the effects of so much food.

Bits of Birmingham

There's no school, Friday, so it's a good day for Birmingham families to go through their closets of toys, books, games, and clothing to sort out the things that can be spared for less fortunate families.

Coming out of the police station Saturday afternoon, the Wainwright was amused to see a little boy about three years old, standing in his father's car, and muttering out of an open window: "Damn, damn!" Apparently the boy's father had gone inside the municipal building and was delayed.

Continuing on our way, we noted the fire department in front of the antique shop at 205 Pierce street, a mere stone's throw from the department headquarters.

It was certainly blustery and cold Saturday and we sympathized with the people who have to work outside all around. One wet, thinking of the thousands freezing at the football game at Ann Arbor, observed that many would be taking the same anti-freeze precautions that they would with their cars—only not by using the de-icing product.

A note from the information department of Wayne University revealed that "Dr." Lee A. Wheeler had a panel discussion at a dinner meeting Friday evening of the Phi Delta Kappa national education fraternity. We know that Lee was a member of the Class of 1940, University of Michigan, but never had knowledge of this further educational laurel.

Mary Kaufman, 20 years old, maid at the Samuel Clark home in Bloomfield Highlands, received a car gas burn that her face last week when she examined a tear gas can which had a fountain pen.

A Forest avenue boy, 17, decided on a little adventure last week and hitch-hiked his way to Cincinnati and back. Meanwhile his parents were worried and reported him missing to the police.

The Birmingham Smiths are fairly numerous, taking up nearly half a page in the telephone book. Therefore, it is with a very red face that we announce that it was Mrs. Frederick B. Smith, Jr., of Wibleton Terrace, and not Mrs. Laurence P. Smith, of West Maple road, who is seeking Birmingham women who are eligible for the Women's Overseas League, which meets monthly in Detroit. She wishes they would communicate with her so that she might have company in attending the Detroit meetings. Any woman who served abroad during the last war is eligible.

Young Jack Dunn and the good ship Tubique is scowling on its way to the St. Lawrence river and Atlantic ocean, for he's a naval reservist aboard this ancient training ship recently ordered to Boston by the high admiralty. Jack was graduated from Baldwin High last June and after working here and there this summer, got a job at the store of the Birmingham Paint and Glass company, but was forced to give up this work two weeks ago when called to active duty. For The Eccentric, Jack was a faithful conductor of the Boy Scout column, and so far, the editor hasn't found anyone to take his place.

More Power to Thrift—more Thrift from Power
We think most people would rather own a bigger, solid, steeper, roomier, better automobile. Most of them would be willing to spend a little extra for what Buick has to offer—style, size, room, steadiness, durability—if part of that extra could be paid back through lower operating costs.
Especially, they would like really satisfying performance—quick take-off, easy hill-climbing, sure power, fast response—if they could have it in a car that's stingy with gasoline.
That's what we've given them—through the extra power in this 1941 Buick.
The added wallop of FIREBALL engine design and Compound Carburetion lets us use more thrifty gear ratios, saving money without complicating extra gears or mechanisms.
And the tremendous reserve-power in these Buick engines—at 40, for instance, you have as much as 85% of your power "on call"—still permits the flashing get-away, the swooping hill-climb, the sure lift out of pinches you once had to buy with heavy gasoline consumption.
So we say—more power to thrift—
It adds up to the sensation of the year—the car you ought to see first—the brilliant, able beauty your Buick dealer has waiting for you.
